Lodge Sees Roosevelt, Demands Textile Aid

Asks Return Of PWA for Bay State

WASHINGTON, March 2—In the interests of Massachusetts labor and the state's textile industry, youthful Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., paid his first call on President Roosevelt today.

Lodge said he urged protection of his state's textile industry in the reciprocal trade agreement being negotiated with Great Britain and construction of public works in Massachusetts under PWA, rather than WPA, regulations.

Of chief concern to Massachusetts labor, Lodge said, is the WPA regulation under which work is parcelled out "part time," or from day to day.

The PWA regulation assuring full weeks of labor is preferred, he said.

Extension of the "prevailing wage" in the building industry in Massachusetts also was discussed with the President by Lodge.

Lodge succeeded in incorporating the "prevailing wage" clause in recent legislation, but the clause was not retained in the legislation as finally enacted.

House Uproar Over President

Never Did Day's Work Rep. Rich Shouts

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Representative Rich (R.) of Pennsylvania threw the House into an uproar today by shouting at the top of his lungs that President Roosevelt never had done a day's work in his life.

Democrats snapped back, with Representative McCormack (D.) of Massachusetts asserting it was "very unwise, highly improper and decidedly unethical for anyone to attack or impugn the President of the United States."

In the center of the whole dispute was a proposal by Representative Scrugham (D.) of Nevada to boost from $100,000 to $350,000 an item for the Provo River reclamation project, in Utah, in the Interior Department appropriation bill.

Girl, Youth to Wed In Prison Chapel

BERTHA FORD

"I Have Loved Him Since Schooldays"

Groom, Waiting Trial, Sweetheart, 18, "Proud to Marry Him, Even in Jail"

Within the grim walls of Charles street jail love shone triumphant today as an 18-year-old Roxbury girl prepared to wed her sweetheart awaiting trial.

From her own lips came the exclusive story, told to the Boston Evening American by Bertha Ford, of Linden Park street, Roxbury, of undaunted romance defying convention with a proposed marriage to a 18-year-old youth.

The groom-to-be, James Brushingham of Hammond street, Roxbury, is being held in Suffolk County jail for trial tomorrow, in Roxbury court on charges of breaking and entering and larceny.

IN PRISON CHAPEL

The unique ceremony was scheduled to take place in the jail chapel today according to the couple's marriage license obtained through waiver of the five-day law. A Morgan Memorial clergyman would officiate, the girl revealed.

"Jimmy is the grandest boy in the world," she said. "There can never be anyone else for me.

"I have loved him since our schooldays together," she added. "He isn't really bad, and I am proud to marry him—even in jail. We both want to forget everything that has happened and start life anew."

Sadly, Bertha confessed her hope that Jimmy would "get a break" in his coming trial.

"No matter what the outcome, I will wait for him," she said with determination.

PARENTS "CONSENT"

As soon as Jimmy is free, the young couple will spend a honeymoon in Albany, N. Y. They will make their home with the prospective bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry R. Brushingham, of Hammond street.

Sole attendants at today's wedding ceremony will be Mr. and Mrs. Brushingham, Bertha disclosed.

Although her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Ford of Linden Park, were said by the girl to have given consent to the marriage, they oppose the jail ceremony in which she planned to take part she admitted.

Brushingham, the groom-to-be, was one of a trio arrested by special officers of the Dudley street police station.

Roosevelt Signs Relief Bill.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—President Roosevelt today signed the $250,000,000 emergency relief appropriations bill which will permit the addition of 500,000 unemployed to WPA rolls.

The $250,000,000 will supplement the regular relief funds for the rest of this fiscal year. current business recession.

The new funds will cover the expense of 500,000 more jobs authorized yesterday by WPA authorities.

Punitive Tax Blamed for Recession

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—Two witnesses told the Senate Unemployment Committee today that the crux of all plans for business recovery lies in the abolition of "punitive" taxation.

Ralph E. Flanders, member of Commerce Secretary Roper's Business Advisory Council, asserted that the family corporation levy in the new House tax bill and the undistributed profits tax "make the expansion of business and employment . . . inexcusably difficult."

"Up until a year ago," said Flanders, "it was my personal conviction that the unfavorable sentiment which held back spending and investing was to be laid about equally at the door of industry and government.

"As one citizen among many millions, I have now come to the conclusion that the full measure of responsibility must be laid at the door of government for the state of mind which induces us to hold onto our money."

"THROTTLES MARKET"

From George H. Houston, of Philadelphia, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, came a recommendation for repeal of the undistributed profits tax and amendment of the capital gains levy, both of which he classified as "punitive."

Houston testified that the capital gains tax "frequently" keeps taxpayers from selling securities and thus "throttles" a free market.

Soviet Opens Trial of 21; One Fights

MOSCOW, March 2 (AP)—A defendant who desperately protested his innocence of treason charges against him today interjected a dramatic note into the opening of the trial of 21 fallen Soviet leaders.

He was N. N. Krestinsky, former assistant commissar of foreign affairs.

All the defendants pleaded guilty to the charges of spying and terrorism against them. This came after the indictment had been read and the president of the court had questioned the accused.

STICKS TO DENIAL

The indictment also quoted at length from an alleged confession by Krestinsky, which said he had entered into a treasonable plot with General Hans von Seekt, German military leader who died in 1936, at the behest of the exiled Leon Trotsky.

But Krestinsky repudiated this confession, and sharp attempts by the prosecution to shake his repudiation failed. His stout defense under grilling so agitated him he had to halt while he took a tablet for his nerves.

DENIES CRIMES

"I did not commit the crimes of which I am accused," he shouted, "I have been a member of the (Communist) party and still consider myself one."

Krestinsky declared he voluntarily had testified falsely in the preliminary investigation because he was "convinced there was no

Pershing Sits Up in Bed, Eats

Immediate Danger Passed, Medicos Say

TUCSON, Ariz., March 2 (AP)—General John J. Pershing, who a week ago was believed dying, awoke today from a fairly restful sleep, enjoyed breakfast propped up in bed, and called for his barber.

"The immediate danger apears to have passed," said Dr. Roland Davison in the first bulletin of the day from the bedside.

Dr. Davison said the first time the doctors went in to make an examination this morning, the 77-year-old World War commander was being bathed, and the second time he was eating a breakfast of grapefruit and cereal.

The general refused to permit one of the nurses to feed him, insisted on doing it himself.

Student Subsidies Urged by Conant

Would Replace Many in Colleges With Poor Talented Youths

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 2—At least 25 per cent—and maybe 50 per cent—of the students doing advance work in American universities should be supplanted by more talented youths who can't afford to go to college, President James Bryant Conant of Harvard University said today.

He told the American Association of School Administrators that less than five per cent of American families have incomes of $5,000 a year or more, and consequently universities are bidding against each other for their children, while brighter youngsters of poorer families miss opportunities that might better be theirs.

URGES SCHOLARSHIP

Dr. Conant said there was only one way to provide university education for the promising youths "now debarred by economic and geographic factors," and that is by "generous subsidy—large scholarships or opportunities for earning sizable amounts of money."

He observed that 63 per cent of the youngsters between 14 and 17 attended high school, but only 11 per cent of those between 18 and 21 attend colleges or universities.

"Only the most unrealistic optimist," said Dr. Conant, "would believe that the accidental interplay of social and economic forces has resulted in the selection of the right 11 per cent of our youth for college work."

Dr. Conant expressed belief that "society cannot make a graver mistake than to provide advanced higher education of a specialized nature to men and women who are unable subsequently to use this training.

"Quite apart from economic considerations, the existence of any large number of highly educated individuals whose ambitions have been frustrated is unhealthy in any nation."

He observed 80 per cent of American families have incomes of

Hunt Lost Plane in Snow

FRESNO, Calif., March 2 (AP)—Trapped by a sudden, violent storm, a TWA airliner was believed today to have crashed with its nine occupants in the mountains east of Fresno.

The Transcontinental and Western air transport had not been heard from since 9:28 o'clock last night, when Pilot John Graves reported he was flying blind and preparing to make an emergency landing at Fresno.

Bound from San Francisco to Los Angeles, the plane was caught in a sudden rain and windstorm as it flew over the Tehachapi mountains about 8:30 p. m. Ice formed on the wings. Rain fell in torrents. Static interfered with radio.

During the next hour the plane seemingly wandered in the air over San Joaquin valley trying to dodge the storm and keep on the radio beacon.

Graves reported he was preparing to drop down from 10,000 feet to land. Then silence.

ALL PLANES GROUNDED

All planes on the coast were grounded by the continuing wind and rain. Searching parties were formed to trek into the mountains by auto and on foot.

Planes were ready to help as soon as weather permitted.

The route of the 14-passenger craft had been changed before its takeoff because of adverse weather over the mountains. The six passengers were to have changed planes at Los Angeles to continue eastward.

THREE IN CREW

This was the first mishap to mar the TWA record on the Pacific coast since the line began service in the Far West in 1928.

Besides Pilot Graves, the crew was composed of First Officer C. W. Wallace and Stewardess M. M. Wilson.

TWA said the six passengers and their destinations were:

H. M. Salisbury, TWA first officer, Los Angeles.

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Waltz, Chicago.

V. Krause, Kansas City.

Tracy Dirlam, Columbus, O.

Miss Mary Lou Dirlam, Columbus, O.

The Dirlams were Stanford University students.

Roosevelt Threat to Have U. S. Ships Built Abroad

Kennedy Will Seek Tentative Bids on Cargo Craft

New Ambassador to Work for British Trade Treaty

By KINGSBURY SMITH
International News Service Staff Correspondent
(Copyright, 1938)

LONDON, March 2—President Roosevelt plans a threat to build up the American merchant marine with foreign-built boats, unless American ship-building companies reduce construction costs, International News Service is able to reveal today.

With this in mind, Roosevelt has instructed Joseph P. Kennedy, new ambassador to London and former chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, to seek tentative bids from British ship-building firms on about a dozen cargo craft.

Kennedy is also here to help push forward a trade agreement with Great Britain, in his words—"the sooner the better."

The ship-building estimates which Kennedy seeks will form the basis of a report to the President, which Roosevelt, it is understood, will use as a lever to try to break allegedly monopolistic price-boosting practices at home.

HITS AT HIGH COST

Otherwise, the President will submit a report to Congress recommending that foreign-built ships be used to develop the American merchant marine.

(In his final report as chairman of the Maritime Commission, Kennedy decried the high cost of ship-building in the United States, pointing out that equivalent ships could be built at much lower costs in some foreign countries.)

Closely related to the merchant marine question is the problem of their cargoes—in other words, trade.

CURE OF WORLD ILLS

That the world's democracies should stand firm against the threats of dictators and fortify themselves by improving trade relations and generally strengthening the bonds of economic unity is the burden of the message which Kennedy will deliver to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

Kennedy will tell Chamberlain that the American people view unfavorably the tendency of dictators to seek economic and political agreements under the implied threat that the agreements must be on the dictator's terms—"or else."

Kennedy will emphasize that both Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull still are convinced that the cure of the world's political ills lies in the solution of economic problems.

Stepping from the gangplank of the United States liner Manhattan, Ambassador Kennedy said the sooner a trade pact is arranged and signed by Britain and America the better he would be pleased. He emphasized:

FACES CAMERA BATTERY

"I shall do all in my power to speed the matter to its logical conclusion. Such an agreement is one of the foremost problems confronting me on this mission."

Kennedy said he was not bringing with him any definite plan to negotiate treaties or agreements, adding:

"I am going to have a good look around first . . . The European situation is changing so fast I would rather know something about it before making any comment."

FEELS "LIKE ACTRESS"

Asked about British war debts to the United States, the new American diplomat replied that he had no special authorization to discuss the debt question.

Before revealing news of a proposed Anglo-American trade pact, Kennedy quipped gaily with reporters. Asked how he felt about his new job, he laughed and said:

"I feel like an actress who reads her own press notices."

Kennedy to Cut Down on Debs to Be Presented

Envoy Determined Also to Shy Away From Knee Pants

(Copyright, 1938)

LONDON, March 2 (INS)—Joseph Kennedy brought bed-rock Americanism to England today, to the minor sorrow of silk stocking and silver buckle manufacturers, and to the vast grief of hosts of ambitious American sub-debs.

Let it now be said, to the undying glory of the rich but democratic new ambassador, that he does not intend to wear knee breeches at court "if he can help it."

But to hundreds of young ladies the type of trousers that Kennedy will wear is a matter of utmost triviality. They will be aghast to learn that the new ambassador favors cutting down the number of American girls to be presented at the court this season.

He feels, according to close associates, that it is a "reflection on American dignity" to have hundreds of girls clamoring for permission to kow-tow to royalty.

Kennedy may definitely reduce the number of debutantes at this season's courts, although he plans to discuss the matter first with veteran embassy officials before making a final decision.

Four or five courts are to be held at Buckingham Palace during May and June. There will also be the usual garden party in July.

Kennedy's attitude toward the conventional knee breeches is similar to that toward presentations at court—and he is militant about it.

He is determined, friends said, to be a "100 per cent American ambassador." He feels that the American people prefer that their ambassadors to the country's most important diplomatic post do not go around in knee pants.

The ambassador is even prepared to take the matter direct to Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, if necessary, to explain the psychological effect that the wearing of knickerbockers will have back home.

Kerensky Lands In N. Y., Predicts Stalin Fall

Ex-Russian Premier Says Dictator Waits New World War

NEW YORK, March 2 (INS)—Assailing all dictatorship as "regimes of war," Alexander Kerensky, former premier of Russia, today predicted the people of Russia will overthrow Josef Stalin and set up a democracy.

"I am not a prophet," he said, "but you can rest assured there is going to be a drastic change in Russia—possibly within a short time."

Kerensky arrived on the liner Berengaria for a U. S. lecture tour which will include Washington, Chicago, Detroit and Boston.

He pictured Dictator Stalin as a "vulture" ready to swoop down upon a strife-torn world, and warned that America is the one bulwark against universal Bolshevism.

Kerensky declared the aim of Stalin is preparedness for war.

EXPECTS WORLD WAR

"He expects a new world war shortly. He believes it will plunge the world into a class war which will be his great opportunity to step in with Bolshevism.

"Stalin will sit like a vulture in the world conflict he feels is coming and then step in, after the other nations are tired, for a world revolution.

"I have just come from western Europe, where the democratic system is being dangerously undermined by various forces of totalitarianism — Fascism, Communism and Nazism.

"This strife of ideas adds to the increasing threat of war, and menaces us all with another world catastrophe."

BANS TROTSKY

Referring to today's trial of 21 Soviet leaders in Moscow, Kerensky said:

"It is no more than can be expected. Stalin will brook no opposition. Russia today is one continuous struggle between a personal dictator, in Stalin, and the whole country.

"Since 1936, 25 Russians have been executed every day. Look at the concentration camps. They now hold 5,000,000 of my countrymen.

"This great country (Russia) must be free. It is certain. Although I cannot prophesy the date, I can forsee the tendency."

Asked if he intended to see Leon Trotsky, who is in exile in Mexico, Kerensky replied:

"I should say not.

"There is no difference, in my mind, between the policies of Trotsky and Stalin. Both were policies of extermination of people who would not bow to their will."

Soviets Try 21, One Denies All, Repudiates 'Confession'

War Fear Behind New Soviet Purge Revealed By Isaac Don Levine

By ISAAC DON LEVINE
Author of "Stalin"

The key to the newest sensational phase of Stalin's purge is to be found in his morbid fear that the long-awaited war against the Soviet Union is already on.

The reversion of the purge to the earlier technique of the show trial is Stalin's answer to the international crisis which threatens the complete isolation of Russia.

There is war panic in the Kremlin, as evidenced by the appeals recently issued from there to the world proletariat. The show unfolding now before the Moscow Military Tribunal is designed to terrorize the country further into absolute submission.

Thousands Slain in Silent Purge Since 1937

The purge never abated since the last show trial of Radek-Piatakov, held in January, 1937. Only the publicity was missing while Stalin disposed of his thousands of silent victims. The foreign correspondents in Moscow kept busy combing the provincial Soviet press and adding up the lists of the executed.

Stalin's resumption of the demonstration trial method is his typical defiant rejoinder to the resignation of Anthony Eden, to the Hitler speech, to the Hitler-Schuschnigg conference, to the elevation of Lord Halifax, and to the Chamberlain-Mussolini negotiations.

All these developments portend the breakdown of the International edifice built by Stalin and the rise of a Four-Power Pact among Great Britain, Germany, Italy and France.

The spectre of a collapse of the Franco-Russian alliance and of the disintegration of the united front movements fostered by the Stalinists throughout the world is sufficient to lash the Soviet dictator into a mad frenzy.

Every Soviet purge in the past has been preceded by a breakdown, either economic or political, either internal or external.

This is the law of the Red Terror. For a dictatorship ruling by frightfulness is the first to yield to fright. As long ago as July, 1927, Stalin proclaimed:

"Another imperialist war is unquestionably impending. We refer not to some indefinite, vague 'danger' of a new war, but to the real and imminent threat of a new war in general, and of war against the Soviet Union in particular . . . England prefers wars fought with the hands of others . . . The entire international situation . . . proves that the British Tory Government has definitely and concertedly undertaken to organize a war against the Soviet Union."

Hobnobbed With Italy 10 Years Ago

That was written more than a decade ago, and it ushered in the first punitive Stalin drive against Premier Rykov, Nikolai Bukharin, Kamenev and Zinoviev, all of the Right opposition, and against the already demoted but still powerful Trotzky and the then ambassador to France, Christian Rakovsky, of the Left opposition.

In fact, it was the real beginning of the grand Stalin purge. Three of these men are now among the 21 foredoomed figures in today's trial scene. But at the time Stalin was seeing the war against Russia as imminent, his government was hobnobbing with Mussolini, there was no sign of Hitler's conquest of power, and Great Britain was engrossed with the domestic consequences of its general strike.

Such was Stalin's dread of attack ten years ago. Today he already sees the shadow of marching armies within his borders. Hence, the unmistakable note of war hysteria in his recent outcries.

Two weeks ago he addressed his frantic appeal to the workers of the world to rally behind the Soviet Government in the event of war.

Last week an even more desperate call went out from the headquarters of the Communist International inviting the labor forces of all countries to join hands with the Red Army.

These two cries for help presaged the latest outburst of terrorism. Soviet war preparedness always began with mass terrorization.

The melange of indictments made against the Rykov-Bukharin-Yagoda-Rakovsky group, ranking from fantastic charges of poisoning Maxim Gorky to heresy against Lenin in 1921, shows signs of hasty improvisation.

Above all, it shows Stalin with his back against the wall on the international arena, facing what he believes to be certain encirclement, and wreaking his vengeance on those who had foreseen disaster at the end of his rainbow.

(Another article by Isaac Don Levine on the Russian mass-trial will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

The prosecutor called on three other defendants—A. P. Rosengoltz, Gregory F. Grinko and S. A. Bessonoff—to contradict Krestinsky with declarations they had talked with him about his Trotskyist activities. But Krestinsky denied all such charges.

Declaring he was in Moscow throughout 1933, he denied Bessonoff's testimony concerning a meeting of Krestinsky and Trotzky in that year.

Krestinsky, who once before had been under a cloud as a member of the Trotskyist opposition to Joseph Stalin's regime, declared he broke with Trotsky in a letter he wrote in January, 1927.

INDICTMENT READ

The sweeping indictment against the group of 21 was read before the military collegium of the Supreme Court.

It listed alleged espionage records of various former members of the government and diplomats who, the indictment said, had the encouragement of Nikolai Bucharin and Alexis I. Rykoff, the chief defendants.

Rykoff is former premier of Russia, and Bucharin formerly was an editor of Soviet newspapers and a friend of Stalin.

The plotters were accused of conspiring with foreign powers to overthrow the Soviet Union and hand huge slices of Russian territory to the powers.

Genrikh G. Yogada, former secret police chief, was said to have confessed that Maxim Gorky, famed Russian writer, was murdered in the plot because of his political influence.

Christian Rakovsky, former Soviet ambassador to France, was accused of working for the English intelligence service in 1924, and the Japanese in 1934.

M. A. Chernoff, former commissioner of agriculture, was described as a German spy since 1928.

The indictment cited the confession of Dr L. G. Levin, former head of the Kremlin Hospital, that he killed Gorky's son, Maxim Peshkoff, as well as Gorky and two others.

Levin said Yagoda, at that time head of the secret police, ordered Peshkoff's death in 1934. Levin said he was afraid to refuse. He was aided, he said, by Dr. D. D. Pletnyeff, famous heart specialist, and P. P. Kruchkoff Gorky's secretary, both defendants in this trial.

FATAL "CURES" TOLD

The indictment told a fantastic story of how prominent victims had been "cured to death."

It said Yagoda confessed:

"We knew that if we carried out a coup d'etat and Gorky was not on our side, he would raise his voice against us."

P. P. Bulanoff, one of the accused, said he heard Yagoda advise Kruchkoff to have Gorky catch cold. In view of the tubercular condition of the writer's lungs, he said it would be easy for Levin and Pletnyeff to "finish the job."

Pletnyeff's confession said that when he was approached by Yagoda for help in the removal of Gorky and V. V. Kuibisheff, chief of the first five-year plan, he first hesitated, then "accepted this terrible order." It went on:

"I then drew up a plan of treatment which would worsen their conditions and hasten their ends. My anti-Soviet views helped me accept the order. I had been concealing those views until my arrest."

ASSASSINATION CITED

The confessions of Levin and Dr. I. N. Kazakoff, head of a big clinic, said Kazakoff was chosen to kill Menjinsky—former head of the secret police—whose removal was ordered by Yagoda, because Kazakoff prepared his own medicine in his private laboratory. Menjinsky died in his sleep, Levin said, adding there was no doubt in his mind death was the effect of Kazakoff's medicine.

Bulanoff's confession said that Yagoda, who long had wanted Menjinsky, his predecessor as head of the secret police, removed, was "greatly annoyed by Menjinsky's keeping on living."

"As Menjinsky did not like Levin, we put Kazakoff on," he said.

Gorky died in June, 1936; Kuibisheff in May, 1936; Menjinsky in April, 1937.

The official press was filled with indications that most, if not all, the accused men would be shot.

Vasily V. Uurich, veteran judge who sat in the treason trials of August, 1936, and January, 1937, again presided, flanked by two other judges, all wearing army uniforms.

Most of the defendants seemed resigned to their fate, whatever it may be, showing few signs of nervousness. Bucharin sat in the corner of the box nearest the judges, staring dejectedly at the floor except when making occasional notes on a pad on his knee.

The courtroom, small but elaborately decorated ballroom of the former Nobles' Club, was jammed with spectators, their benches extending close to the end of the room in which were the prisoners' box and the cramped quarters of the judges and prosecutors who were arrayed around green felt covered tables.

Four soldiers with fixed bayonets stood guard over the prisoners. Half a dozen microphones were scattered before the judges and among the prisoners.

Retiring United States Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, from a bench at the front of the room, watched Krestinsky and A. P. Rosengoltz, former commissar of foreign trade, both of whom had been hosts to the ambassador, take their places among the accused.

Pope's Policies Reflected in Drive Against 'Godlessness,' Says Msgr. Sheen

Special to Boston American

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 2—The Rt. Rev. Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, professor of fundamental theology at Catholic University of America, said today that the Hearst newspapers' proposal for a union of churches against Atheism and Paganism is in keeping with the policies of Pope Pius XI.

Father Sheen, famous radio preacher on the Catholic Hour, quoted from the encyclical "Divini Redemptoris," in which the Holy Father says that even those who do not believe in the Divinity of Christ and of the church can unite in their common love of God.

Father Sheen was asked about the statement of Jane Anderson, political writer, that his name is on a list of 100 opponents of Communism who have been marked for death. He replied:

"I've known it for a year. I heard it first on a shortwave broadcast. I heard my name mentioned, and then the statement that 'we will not be satisfied until his head is rolling in the gutter.' "

The list, said Father Sheen, is being constantly "brought up to date," and was revised at the recent Congress of the Communist party in New York. With a smile, he said:

"That's a strange thing about Christianity. In order to get a martyr's crown you've got to lose your head, and then you have no place to put the crown."

Father Sheen said he would feel "very much aggrieved" if his name were not on the list. He said:

"The Communists hate me, but I don't hate them. In fact, I'm rather fond of them. What I don't like is their system.

"My attitude is like that of a physician. He hates the typhoid, but loves the patient, and tries to cure him.

"As a Christian I'm committed to the solemn obligation to love the Communists. I'd like to make Americans of them. I'd like to see them de-Moscowized.

"I'm their greatest propagandist because I'm publicizing their entire system, not camouflaging it as they do. Their policy is to conceal the truth until they are ready to strike."

3 Religions Pledge Unity In Drive Against Atheism

Hearst Editorial Lauded by Leaders at Brotherhood Meeting in Brookline

Leaders in Greater Boston churches and synagogues—Catholics, Protestants and Jews, joined today to hail the call for a united front to halt the spread of Atheism and Paganism, following a Brotherhood meeting held in Temple Ohabei Shalom, Beacon street, Brookline, last night.

More than 1300 persons, including leading clerics of the Catholic and Protestant faiths, outstanding Jewish Rabbis, state and city officials and prominent members of the Massachusetts bar and bench attended.

At the suggestion of those present at the meeting churches and religious groups in Greater Boston will be asked to unite in promoting national brotherhood days.

EDITORIAL PRAISED

Rev. Robert P. Barry, director of the Catholic Charitable Bureau in the Boston Archdiocese, lauded the Hearst editorial calling for a united front to defeat Atheism and Paganism.

Speaking on the subject "The Challenge of Today," Father Barry told his audience of the importance of Brotherhood meetings and the present crisis which exists in various parts of the world.

Father Barry in part said:

"One of the first expressions in democracy and religion is the love of God and neighbor.

MUST MEET CHALLENGE

"Regardless of whether we be Catholic, Protestant or Jew we must be ready to meet the challenge of those that are trying to destroy the roots of civilization and religion.

"We of the Catholic church have been working toward such an end for a long time. It is not only Christinaity and Judaism, but all religion is involved in this fight. We much all work together."

Father Barry related the upheavals and chaotic conditions that now exist in such nations as Germany, France, Italy, Spain and Mexico. He cited the drift of these countries from spiritual motives to material.

"Ideas that we don't need religion seems to be rampant in several foreign nations," said Father Barry.

"Religion alone is the basis of peace and unity and religion is the basic principle of American democracy.

"We should all respect the Constitution of the United States which grants us the right to free speech and free religion.

"The recent editorial of Mr. Hearst based on a united front to combat Atheism and Paganism is one that is worthy and of unestimable service to the American people."

TALK BY RABBI

Rabbi Samuel J. Abrams of Temple Ohabei Shalom stressed the importance of the holding of a national congress of good will in the United States annually which would reach definite conclusions and plans to be carried out by leaders of the three powerful groups.

Rabbi Abrams said:

"Five or more years ago these brotherhood meetings were established. Since the world has been in choas here and elsewhere, especially elsewhere, violent conflict has been in the air.

"What we need is a reformation of the world with a reformation of the individual which would render baptism of brotherhood and good-will.

"We should extend and enlarge such groups as this one here tonight not only in America, but throughout the world.

"We should take the initiative here in Massachusetts for a movement that would eventually establish a national Good-Will Congress in America that would meet yearly and devise plans and reach definite conclusions for brotherhood.

"Let the motto of this congress be "America Safe For Difference," it would emphasize the importance of the freedom and liberty which we now enjoy under the constitution."

Speaking of the situation overseas Rabbi Abrams declared that certain nations are setting forth fire in an attempt to burn the standards of Christianity.

In his concluding statement Rabbi Abrams said.

SMITH PROFESOR SPEAKS

'The principles of religion is for the uplifting of our social structure, promotion of good will among our fellow-men. With these thoughts in mind a unity of mankind may be formed which would promote peace and advancement of civilization."

The concluding speaker of the evening, Professor Ralph Harlow head of the department of religion at Smith College, took as his topic "Race Prejudices."

"It is a great pleasure to be where a priest, rabbi and minister meet at the same table with the same thought in mind," said Professor Harlow.

"Meetings of this type could not be held everywhere and in certain countries if the same were said there as here tonight we would all either be in jail or concentration camps.

"Here in the United States there has been a tendency to break Christian and Jew, but the barrier is too strong.

"If religion stands for anything it should stand for brotherhood. Hatred ought to die in this world of ours and especially here in America. We are too advanced and civilized to harbor any ill feeling amongst our fellow-men. I might even add that right here in Massachusetts propaganda is being spread to tear down our American principles and promote race prejudices among the citizenry.

"The spirit of comradeship must be inculcated into the minds of our younger generation so that they may grow up to understand his fellow-man."

The meeting was presided over by Max I. Karol president of the temple brotherhood. Among those present included Rev. Michael J. Ahearn, Boston College; Rev. Frank Jennings, Massachusetts Council of Churches; Dennis Dooley, state librarian; Henry H. Meyer, dean of Boston University school of religion; Hon. A. C. Ratshesky, former minister to Czechoslovakia, and Judge A. K. Cohen.

Wins Dramatic Hospital Race

Thomas F. Casey of Mt. Greylock CCC camp today was at the bedside of his stricken mother in City Hospital after news of her illness was carried to him in Northwest Mounted style.

The wilderness CCC camp was isolated by eight-foot drifts of snow and all forms of communication were down.

State Police at Commonwealth Pier sought to solve the situation with a teletype message to the Pittsfield barracks in western Massachusetts. Trooper Edward A. Sivik drove a cruiser to within two miles of the camp before he became stalled. He then fought his way through drifts on foot; notified the youth and brought him back to entrain for Boston at Pittsfield.

Lynn Athletics Head Cruel, Says Wife, Freed

After testifying to several alleged acts of cruelty against her, Mrs. Lona P. Smith, tall brunette and pretty mother, was granted a divorce today at Salem from John S. Smith, Jr., athletics director at Breed Junior High School, Lynn.

Judge Edward B. O'Brien, in Salem probate court, also granted the wife $20 a week toward support of the baby, Patricia, who will be two years old in May.

The couple were married October 11, 1934, at Lynn, and had their first trouble the following January, she testified, when he punched her after she objected to his male friend from next door waking them up at night.

At a New Year's Eve party in December, 1935, she objected to his drinking and he again struck her, she declared.

Smith gave her a black eye and attempted to choke her, in August, 1936, Mrs. Smith asserted, after they had attended a wedding and he had brought a friend home at 3 a. m. and put him to bed downstairs.

Duce Pays Visit To Bier of D'Annunzio

State Rites Tomorrow For Italy's Noted Warrior-Poet

GARDONE RIVIERA, Italy, March 2 (AP)—Premier Mussolini, his face lined with grief, today visited the bier of Gabrielle D'Annunzio, who lay in state in the Villa Vittoriale. The warrior-poet had named his villa thus for the Italian World War triumph over Austria.

Crowds cheered Il Duce as he rode through the streets accompanied by members of his government, but the Premier's sad expression did not once relax. He went directly to the villa from his special train.

After Il Duce's departure, the public was admitted to the lying-in-state.

STATE FUNERAL PLANNED

The 74-year-old poet, who was president of the National Academy of Italy and a symbol of the nationalist dreams of Fascism, was clothed in the uniform of a general of aviation, as he had wished.

His decorations were on his breast and at his feet lay the flag he raised when he defied his government to capture and hold Fiume after the World War.

Cerebral hemorrhage caused the death of the Italian hero late yesterday. Despite the many points of conflict between him and the Vatican, the Archipresbyter of Gardone imparted absolution after his death.

A state funeral will be held tomorrow.

BURIAL ON SACRED HILL

Reading of the poet's spiritual testament, to which all Italy looks with the expectation it will contain an interesting political pronouncement, probably will take place soon after. The testament is in Mussolini's possession.

Burial will be in the marble tomb prepared at the top of the "Sacred Hill" of the villa park, in his cemetery, where lie the heroes of his march on Fiume.

A Milan sculptor, Arrigo Minerbi, made death masks of D'Annunzio's face and hands, and Academician Attilio Silva was named by the academy to make others.

Tragic Infant Is Pet of Hospital

HAVERHILL, March 2—A seven-pound, 11 ounce mite of humanity—born three minutes after the death of the mother, Mrs. Gladys Mae Harris, 38, of 23 South Warren street, Bradford—has stolen the hearts of nurses at the Hale hospital.

The three-day-old infant, one of eight motherless children, was characterized by Miss Jean McCulloch, supervisor of the maternity ward, as the pet of the nursery.

She hastened to explain that all of the 23 inmates of the nursery are "darlings," but "Barbara June is the reigning queen."

The baby, delivered in a Caesarian operation by Dr. Paul Nettle of the Hale Hospital staff, was given the name of Barbara June yesterday by the grieving husband and father, Everett E. Harris. Broken hearted, he explained that his wife had made this choice several weeks before the baby was born.

Dr. Nettle, who has received high praise from medical men for his speed in delivering the child under such conditions, states the infant is normal in every way and predicts she will regain her birth weight of seven pounds, thirteen ounces, before the end of two weeks.

less than $2000 a year, and it is not expected, he said, that they can send their mentally-active children to universities.

Even when they receive scholarships the children's parents cannot afford to pay their living expenses away from home. Therefore, he said, scholarships for such youngsters should include board or whatever other assistance is necessary.

"A generation ago," he said, "it was an easier matter to earn one's way through college, though we often fail to consider at what cost.

"Development of a well-rounded individual with sound health is worth much to the country. The future officers of the army and navy are not expected to pay their way through West Point and Annapolis by doing chores. Why should we treat the future leaders in our non-military adventures with less consideration?"

SETS NEW GOAL

Advocating the development of an "intelectual aristocracy" composed of the most talented members of society, regardless of economic status, he continued:

"If we can darw appreciably nearer to the goal outlined by Jefferson within the next decade, higher education wil flourish as never before. Our children will see what the world has never witnessed: a nation in which basic education is truly universal and careers are open to the talented drawn from every class and section of the land.

"All too many students are struggling so desperately to earn a living while attending college that they permanently impair their health."

Defending his recently-made statement that college enrollments should be more restricted, he added:

"I am inclined to think that probably there are too many rather than too few students in the universities. The social problems created by serious unemployment in the learned professions is obvious.

"In spite of our much vaunted democracy of opportunity and education from all, can any one doubt that of the 89 per cent who do not go to college, at least five per cent have failed to proceed for economic reasons?"

AID TO DEMOCRACY

"That there is a large, untapped reservoir of such promising material, I have no doubt. That geographic and economic factors prevent our utilizing this reserve, I feel quite certain.

It is obvious that there can be no single, uniform pattern for the development of higher education in the next generation. We can, however, define the problem, suggest the alternative routes and by public discussion do our part in dertcing the democracy toward ends we feel desirable.

"Without attempting to play the role of supreme educational planner, any one of us may post warning signs on roads he believes dangerous and impassable.

"We must continually urge upon the country the desirability of directing the expenditure of public money for education with the selective process in mind. This much is certain: That a selection of a group of promising students from all economic levels for higher education in the universities is esential for the continued vitality of a democracy."

$15,000,000 Art Faces Disposal By Mr. Hearst

Inheritance Tax Leads To Break Up Plan; Museums to Benefit

NEW YORK, March 2 (INS)—William Randolph Hearst reluctantly prepared today to break up the $15,000,000 art collection he has spent many years in acquiring.

Because he is averse to saddling his heirs with the entire inheritance tax, some two-thirds of the collection will be disposed of by liberal gifts to museums and by sale.

Reports current in art galleries that the Hearst collection was to be reduced were confirmed by Joseph V. Connolly, president of King Features, a Hearst enterprise.

"Mr. Hearst has spent a good part of his recreation time in life collecting antiques and objects of art," Connolly said. "He has furnished his dwellings with them at San Simeon and Wyntoon, Cal., and in New York, and he has five warehouses full of them.

PLANS MUSEUM GIFTS

"When he passes on, his estate will have to pay inheritance taxes on some $15,000,000 worth of these objects unless he makes other disposal of them.

"It is his intention to leave many to his family, to give liberally of them to museums, and to sell a considerable part, in which case his family will have to pay inheritance taxes only on about $5,000,000 of art objects.

"That will be burden enough."

Ranked as one of the most important collections offered in the art market in many years, the Hearst collection will be sold through Parish-Watson & Co., Inc., while distribution to museums also is in progress.

The collection includes tapestries dating to 1430, portraits by Rembrandt, Hals, Van Dyck and other masters, a fine collection of armor dating back centuries, furniture of all periods and stained glass.

RARE COLLECTIONS

In many fields the Hearst collection never has been equaled or even approached. It includes considerably more than 50 period-paneled rooms—an extraordinarily valuable collection.

For silver it goes back to Elizabeth of England with one piece, a chalice, bearing a date believed to be 1222, and continues through Cromwell to George III.

There is Greek sculpture and American Staffordshire and in fact, the product of brush and loom and crude tool from every field of early culture.

An avid collector, Mr. Hearst was passive only in the Far East and Near East fields of art. While they are represented in his collection, the representation is on a considerably narrower scale.

Disposal of the collection will not be rushed.

Upturn in Trade Is Seen Near

Edwin M Murphy, attorney, economist and New England manager of Moody's Investors Service declared that a business upturn was now at hand in a discussion before a group of bank and insurance executives today at the Hotel Kenmore.

"Conditions which caused boom and subsequent recession have largely been corrected," he said. "Investors should now have every confidence in buying securities, particularly high grade industrials.

"It is to be remembered that a year ago Moody's was pointing out the dangers in the business and industrial pictures and recommending sales of stocks. It is now rather heartening to see a service which has had such a fine record over the past 40 years to get bullish again."

Of the eight felled by fumes, three were taken to Whidden Memorial Hospital while the others were revived at the scene.

Admitted to the hospital were Mrs. Shepard, Arthur Zackular, 54, of Shirley street, and Arthur Zackular, 8, his grandson.

The other five were Paratto Caimi, 53, his wife, Josephine 43, and their three children, Josephine, 16, Anna, 12, and Mary 9. They also live in Shirley street.

EARTH SETTLED ON MAIN

According to gas company officials, the escape of the gas was caused by settling of earth on the main.

Emergency calls were sent out to summon every available doctor, police officer and fireman. Police ambulances sped to the scene to transfer those in serious condition to the hospital.

On the more serious cases—the Caimi family—pulmotors were used. In other cases firemen and policemen revived victims by using the prone pressure method.

Drs. Benjamin Barton and Frank Golden, the first physicians on the scene, treated more than 20 persons.

Tells Needs to Gain Trade

From the point of view of the "small businessman," there are only three outstanding needs necessary for a program of economic recovery.

This was the message left in Boston today by DeWitt W. Emery, president of the National Small Businessmen's Association.

Here to promote the national organization, Emery listed the following essentials:

Tax relief, especially modification or repeal of the undistributed profits tax.

Get government out of business and within reasonable moral limitations permit little business to run its own affairs.

A statement from the administration assuring small business men that they will not be harassed further by government.

Emery says the national association was organized and he was chosen president in Akron, Ohio, on November 13, 1937, which was three months before the now famous parley of little business in Washington, which left 21 program planks for the consideration of President Roosevelt.

President Emery smilingly admitted that, while he represents little business men, he is six feet six inches tall. He said he was returning to New York for further organization work today and that later he will go to Washington, where offices of the national group already have been established.

He saw none of the New England leaders of the movement.

A national convention of small business men will be held in June, he said, two delegates to be chosen from each congressional district in each state. He said details of the proposed meeting had not been completed.

Democrats Urge Revision of Profits Tax

Declare Law Sound In Principle; G.O.P. Group Asks Repeal

WASHINGTON, March 2—Defending as "sound in principle" the widely criticized undistributed profits tax, the Democratic majority of the House ways and means committee today filed a report recommending drastic revision of this and the capital gains tax.

The Republican minority of seven, however, filed its own report, denouncing the undistributed profits tax as a major factor in the business recession and urging outright repeal.

Joining in the assault on the tax on closely held companies, two committee Democrats, McCormack of Massachusetts and Lamneck of Ohio, said it "violates all sound principles of taxation" and its "effects are unfair and discriminatory."

McCormack and Lamneck said other provisions of the bill constitute an improvement over existing law, but they listed 19 specific reasons for opposing the levy on closely held corporations.

INCREASE UNEMPLOYMENT

They contended the levy would:

Encourage monopoly, increase unemployment, retard business growth, conflict with sound business and governmental policies.

The majority report said the bill, by providing a well-balanced tax system, should bring about "a very substantial stimulation to business."

Backing up proposals to modify the undistributed profits tax, the Democrats said some of the complaints made against it were justified, but that hardships in many cases "seem to have been exaggerated."

"On the basis of facts," they said in a formal report to the House, "your committee believes that the principle of the undistributed profits tax is sound and and should be retained."

POLITICAL WEAPON

The Democrats said they believed a proposed new surtax on closely held corporations "will not create any serious hardship, and, on the other hand, will protect the revenue."

Striking at these three types of taxes in their separate report, the Republican minority contended that in the "panalty" tax on large-income corporations owned by families or by from two to 10 individuals, the administrtion had forged a "political weapon" to "purge" the business structure of some of its foes.

They said the measure was "vicious" and "iniquitous," because of retention of the principle of levies that have contributed to the "Franklin D. Roosevelt depression."

Senate Import Quiz Asked

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—An imparital Senate inquiry to determine the effect of foreign imports on American unemployment was proposed jointly by Senators Walsh (D) and Lodge (R) of Massachusetts.

The two Senators sponsored a resolution, authorizing such an inquiry by the Senate. They declared the information was desired in view of the increases of imports under reciprocal trading treaties, adding:

"The rising tide of unemployment shows that the need for an adjustment of tariff rates to protect the American wage-earner is urgent."

General Johnson Says:

SOLO RULE FAILS

Deal Theorists to Blame

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON, March 2—When you remember the sweet unanimity over Congress and the country on January 1st, 1937, the condition today seems incredible. Yet, on July 15th of last year I wrote a piece in this place that sent me to the Siberian salt-mines of administration disfavor:

Hugh S. Johnson

"Stand off and look over what has happened in Washington recently. 'Do you see what I see?' or 'there ain't no such animal.' An overwhelmingly victorious party furiously disemboweling itself on the Senate floor! A slicker legislative program planned slyly to revolutionize, at one jump, a form of government that took a century and a half and five wars to make—and to do it so cunningly that the country wouldn't realize it until it was over!

"That program presented with no counsel with legislative leaders who were to enact it! That program prepared secretly by unelected, irresponsible theorists, without consulting experience at any point!

"That program dictated to legislative wheel-horses, and they, ruthlessly herded by hard-riding anonymous young political cowboys to force it regardless of their principles or beliefs!

"The real purposes of that program, promptly exposed to its marrow-bones—shown to be so bad that it had to be made over in a slap-dash panic that leaves it just a wreck of useless odds and ends! Paralysis of legislative action for six months! A fierce mud-slinging from all sides that weakens and hurts the respect of all people for our government in all three branches—the Courts, the Congress and the President. That destruction of ideal and esteem is the deadliest of all this deathly business!

"A relief policy—but the heart sickens in the telling and this is not one-tenth the tale. Unbelievable nightmare—if it were not before our eyes we would say, 'Impossible.'

"Why? In the name of Heaven, why? Because one-man government won't work—no matter how inspired and brilliant the man. Because great government requires a team of great leaders and not one genius surrounded by a pack of second-rate sycophants."

• • •

There was more, but that gives the general idea. I was told it wasn't true and that it was rotten writing—and banished into the outer dark. Well, it was and still is true.

Except for the agricultural bill, which was finally forced by its promise of pap to the embattled farmers, that program is still hung up and there is incipient or open revolt, not only against its original form, but against additions to it like the anti-lynching bill, the battleship bill and the plan to preserve most of the present tax structure.

The diagnosis is still correct. The President has lost control of the Senate because he didn't stick close to its leaders but tried to substitute for them the Cohens and the Corcorans of the palace janissaries. He not only didn't stick to them, but many of them feel he plans to replace such of them as wouldn't take their White House orders second-hand.

• • •

Who got him into this jam? Surely the palace janissaries. In the first place, it was their program that the Senate wouldn't swallow quite as much as their butting in between them and their boss.

All this is a national calamity. On a carefully studied moderate and reasonable program and Congressional leadership through elected leaders, the President could have had almost anything he wanted, and the country would now be at least as far on its way to recovery as it was at July 1, 1933 or, as I believe, much further.

It is now far below that. The cruel truth is that we haven't advanced in almost five New Deal years. We have just churned—more down than up to the loss of nearly all our gains. That is failure.

How long does this have to go on? Why can't the screamingly obvious changes be made to get this country going?

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—You may think that women don't count in politics, but take a look behind-scenes at what the wives of important statesmen are doing today.

In Great Britain it is now disclosed that Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, wife of the Prime Minister, was a vital factor behind the split in the British Cabinet.

Mrs. Chamberlain is a great personal friend of Mussolini, was in Rome all during the Cabinet crisis, and unofficially is carrying on negotiations for a new Anglo-Italian agreement for her husband.

Official reports arriving here show that the British Foreign Office has no idea what conversations have been taking place between Mrs. Chamberlain and Benito, and that the Earl of Perth, British Ambassador to Italy, is now returning to London in order to find out what all the shooting is about.

No wonder Anthony Eden resigned as Foreign Minister.

McNUTT'S WIFE—Inside story now going the rounds regarding the presidential boom of Paul V. McNutt is that his wife, the former Kathleen Timolat of San Antonio, is one of the chief backstage dynamos.

While "The Man from Manila," as he is now called in Washington, has a long list of boosters, Mrs. McNutt is given credit by his close friends for being the most potent and important.

To Mrs. McNutt is attributed the remark: "When Paul gets in the White House he will be the handsomest man ever to be President of the United States."

Note—Ladies who attended last week's hectic Hoosier reception were inclined to agree with Mrs. McNutt. In fact, Evelyn Peyton Gordon, sprightly social columnist, came out with the advice, "If Mr. McNutt would kiss the ladies instead of the babies, he'd be as good as elected."

LADIES' FINGERS—Other ladies now pushing the world around according to their fancy include Mrs. Lehman, whose ambition that Governor Lehman some day may sit in the White House is one of the biggest reasons why her husband probably will run for a fourth term as governor of New York.

Then there is Mrs. Joe Davies, the former Marjorie Post Hutton, who didn't like high society among the Communists, so her husband quit as Ambassador to Russia and has now pushed Hugh Gibson out of his job as Ambassador to Belgium.

And it was Mrs. Gibson, in turn, who didn't like Hugh's job as Ambassador to Brazil and helped push him into the Embassy in Belgium.

Another feminine hand was mixed up in the yarn about the demotion of Lieutenant-Colonel Davenport Johnson for having piloted High Commissioner McNutt from San Francisco to Denver.

Newspapers reported that Johnson was transferred from the choice job of commandant of Hamilton Field, San Francisco, to the Chanute Flying School at Rantoul, Ill., because he had flown McNutt without permission, and because the political powers in Washington did not like McNutt.

Inside story, however, is that Johnson's transfer to Rantoul, Ill., had been ordered two weeks before McNutt arrived in the U. S. A. It was ordered because Colonel John F. Curry was through serving with the General Staff in Washington, was looking for a good berth, and picked Hamilton Field for himself.

This is one of the choicest air posts in the country, and since Curry is a full colonel near the top of the list, and Johnson is a lieutenant-colonel much lower on the list, he was transferred to Rantoul, Ill.

Commissioner McNutt had absolutely nothing to do with it. Real fact was that the temporary war buildings at Rantoul have leaky roofs, and are otherwise unattractive. So, Mrs. Davenport Johnson didn't want to leave San Francisco.

Thus mysteriously leaked out a report that the air junket with the "Man from Manila" was to blame. Presumably it was hoped that McNutt's political influence would reverse the transfer—but it won't.

Breathing Spell In Deal's War On Business

No Anti-Monopoly Legislation Due At This Time

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—By a series of cooperative and placating statements and actions, President Roosevelt is seeking to impress upon the business and financial world that it has no further experimentation to fear from the administration during this session of Congress.

White House aides waited today for reaction to the chief executive's statement that he had no new legislative proposals in mind. If business accepts this utterance, it can rest assured Roosevelt, for instance, will not suggest revision of the anti-trust laws at this time.

NEW "BREATHING SPELL"

In short, the International News Service reported on February 17, the President has instituted another "breathing spell" without making a formal declaration. Rather, he has outlined his intentions in the series of White House conferences with industrial and financial leaders which are still continuing.

The President was much encouraged by the co-operative spirit of the big auto finance companies in agreeing to his sugestions designed to eliminate "high-pressure" auto salesmanship and put more sensible limit on installment buying. This agreemnt, announced by Senator Brown (D.) of Michigan, developed from a White House conference.

Industrialists who attended other assemblies in the President's office are understood to be working among themselves to bring forward similar reports.

STUDYING MONOPOLIES

Roosevelt is continuing his study of monopolistic practices, he said and, some time before Congress adjourns, he intends to send Congress a message on the subject. Word has been circulated among business leaders, however, that all the President will suggest is a study of weaknesses in the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws that might be remedied at the next session of Congress.

manufacturer, said the "bad condition" underlying the business recession was stagnant bank deposits, "built up in the main by government borrowing and spending."

The browned partly bald manufacturer asserted that the present "low rate of turnover on the highest volume of bank deposits this country has ever seen" could not be charged to business.

FEAR TO INVEST

It was caused, he said, by a widespread unwillingness and fear to invest by "hundreds of thousands of individuals" rather than "the fears of malevolence of a small financial group."

He added that the government's efforts to reduce interest rates, and thus encourage investment, were balanced by certain "destructive policies" of government, chief of which is its "unwise vacillating and threatening policy" toward the utilities.

"The utilities policy has shut off what has been calculated to be an immediately available fund of at least a billion dollars which would be glad to flow into investment and employment if reasonable safety were assured," Flanders asserted.

3 UNWISE TAXES

"Besides this, there are the three unwise forms of taxes:

"The undistributed profits tax, which kills or hobbles American enterprise; the capital gains tax, which keeps venturesome money from use; and the new 'third basket' tax, which strikes at owner management of the small and medium-sized company, fosters absentee management, and gives the preference to the large company with its tens of thousands of stockholders."

Leslie Blake Denies Debs 'Lack Charm, Have No Style'

Hits Back at Harvard Youth's Charge of 'Grim Parties'

(Miss Leslie Blake, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Blake of Dedham, has been requested to express her views of Boston Society. Miss Blake is a member of the Vincent Club and the Junior League, and is one of the most popular and attractive post-debutantes in Boston.)

By LESLIE BLAKE
(Assisted by Ann Marsters)

CHAPTER IV.

We always welcome constructive criticism—and now, it seems, we've received some.

It comes from a Harvard student. And I think I'll say that if any more of you have any suggestions or helpful criticisms concerning Boston society and its activities I'd be delighted to receive them. Perhaps you have some interesting opinions, and it might be fun to print a few in this series.

We mentioned last Sunday the escort system of today, which makes young girls so dependent upon the whims of the males—and of which we heartily disapprove.

The following letter from Harvard was one of the results. (The young man says it's quite all right for me to let you read it, so here it is:)

HIS "TWO-BITS" WORTH

"Dear Miss Blake: Having just read your article in the Sunday Advertiser and having always been interested in what could be done to cheer up Beantown society, I felt I migh as well throw in my 'two-bits' worth.

"I think I'm justified in making some suggestions for, although my family hails from Philadelphia, I spent three strenuous years at Milton Academy, not to mention unlimited summers on the North Shore, where I've undergone many Yacht Club dances about which you speak so lovingly—

"As to dinner parties and escorts, I fully agree that the present arrangement is little short of barbarous. In fact, the waiting around after dinner while the men pull themselves together and ask a girl to go on to the dance is one of the grimmest things I know. But if gals would only show a little more enthusiasm, the situation could be improved.

"Not long ago, I went to a dinner and theater party for four where the hostess, a New Yorker, worried all evening about whether or not the other girl, a Bostonian, was having a good time. When people are so plegmatic that they don't even make a pretense of having a good time, the men can't always be blamed.

"Certainly Philadelphia debutantes just itch to get up to Boston for some parties—showing that, when encouraged, Harvardians can be amusing.

OFFERS SOLUTION

"A possible solution might be for the Boston girls to attend schools anywhere out of Massachusetts. In this way, the debs might learn not to wear dresses which, in many cases, you must agree, look as though they had been fashioned out of last year's brocade curtains.

"Also, if more dinner dances wuld be given, much wear and tear could be eliminated in getting a party underway.

"Come on Boston; let's have more charm and less 'ski hail.' Then maybe you won't have to sit at home thinking how selfish men are. What if they are selfish? For Gosh sake, let's see you do something about it!"

So that's the letter—and there's at least one thing in it which I resent a little. It's the bit about our clothes.

I think he's wrong, on that score, because I'm certain the Boston debs are, as a group, very smartly dressed. Nearly every intelligent girl has a sense of style and can dress well on a very moderate clothes allowance.

Debutates here do quite a lot of modeling, and it's clearly evident that they know how to wear clothes. And I can't remember seeing a debutante who looked as though she were dressed in last year's curtains.

As for Harvard students—I mean it when I say that Boston girls are fortunate to have such a grand crowd of boys at their beck and call.

In the past few years, I think the students in general have improved tremendously. They aren't inclined to consider themselves as "smart" as in the days of prohibition—the days when it was SO important to get as many speak-easy cards as possible. They seem to be a lot more sensible, these days; and more aware of the value of soberness—and money.

As a matter of fact, I think all youth has changed for the better, since repeal. Prohibition made drinking so terrifically important to young persons—but now they're able to adopt a calmer attitude toward it.

Perhaps, someday, we'll revert to the point of view that our mothers and grandmothers had in the days when no nice girl would dream of taking a drink. Just as fashion goes in cycles, so, perhaps, will the conduct of young people.

(Tomorrow, Miss Blake will discuss the preparations for debutante parties.)

More Answers In Problems Contest

Here's Your Chance To Check Right Solutions

Again today the Boston Evening American prints six of the 90 correct solutions in the big $20,000 Human Problems Contest.

Prize winners were announced last Monday, the winner of the $15,000 first prize being Mrs. Doris Munroe Halpin, 29-year-old Providence stenographer.

Names of actual persons involved in some news stories on which several of the Human Problems were based are withheld in the solutions, to save living principals from embarrassment. Here are solutions to the second group of six Human Problems:

Human Problem No. 7—"Nothing But the Truth." Correct conclusion: "A." "He told the truth." Based on news stories af famous Massachusetts murder trial.

Human Problem No. 8—"The Last Command." Correct conclusion: "B." "The officials placed the blame on acts of Nature over which they had no control." Based on news stories of Shenandoah tragedy probe.

Human Problem No. 9—"The Wizard's Bride." Correct conclusion: "B." "She parted from him forever; arranged to obtain a divorce." Based on news stories of Ponzi deportation.

Human Problem No. 10—"Theory Versus $1,000,000." Correct conclusion: "B." "He gave practically the whole legacy to a committee organized to fight capitalism." Based on news stories of Charles Garland inheritance.

Human Problem No. 11—"Mother's Love or Father's Money." Correct conclusion: "B." "She remained with her mother." Based on news stories of Salem probate court case.

Human Problem No. 12—"Bad Boy Makes Good." Correct conclusion: "B." "He gloried in being a 'bad boy' mayor." Based on news stories concerning "Bossy" Gillis of Newburyport.

In tomorrow's Boston Evening American there will be correct solutions to the next six Human Problems. Watch for them.

(The illustrated booklets, containing 15 original Human Problems, are now being printed and will be sent to contestants who completed the contest.)

Kay Francis Plans Bridal

Film Star Says She Will Wed Count Soon

HOLLYWOOD, March 2 (INS)—Kay Francis, glamorous film beauty, was all smiles today as she told friends of her approaching marriage to Count Raven Erik Barnekow.

"We haven't set a definite date, but we expect to be married within a few months," Miss Francis declared.

The romance between the two began last summer, when they met at a social function at the Beverly Hills home of Countess Di Frasso.

Count Barnekow is a young German nobleman, is in the aviation business and has been in Hollywood for about a year.

Tufts Players Give 'Winterset'

"Winterset," presented by Pen, Paint and Pretzels, the Tufts College Dramatic Society, opens tonight in the Jackson gymnasium for a three-day run. This production marks the peak of the season's dramatics at Tufts, and is recognized as Maxwell Anderson's hit play of the 1935 season.

Several actors and actresses who have gained fame in previous Tufts productions will participate, with Eleanor Magee of Revere taking the feminine lead as Mirianne. Donald Jones of Bridgeport, Conn., a writer for the Tufts Weekly, shows unquestionable possibilities as Mio, playing opposite Miss Magee.

Jack Gordon of Malden, who boasts 10 years of professional, radio and amateur dramatics, enhances his career as Garth.

Fay had sought to block a hearing by the high court on Miss Stanwyck's appeal from an order which gave the comedian the right to have the child, Dion Anthony Fay, on alternate Saturdays and on Tuesdays and Thursdays of each week.

New Record Set By U. S. Debt

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The Federal debt rose to a new record of $37,632,733,792 on February 28 the daily Treasury statement showed today.

The debt increased $1,208,120,060 in the first eight months of the fiscal year and is now $3,000,000,000 higher than it was a year ago.

On February 28, the deficit was $1,053,198,485, compared with $2,046,015,287 on the same date a year ago. Including the $250,000,000 new relief appropriation just voted by Congress, the deficit is expected to reach $1,544,345,300 by June 30, the end of the fiscal year.

Receipts in the first eight months of the year totaled $3,860,284,765, compared with $2,716,709,242 in the corresponding period of the previous year.

Phoebe Hearst Legion Post Installs Officers

NEW YORK, March 2 (INS)—With adequate national defense and constant warfare against Communism, Nazism, Fascism and all other anti-American "isms" as the keynotes, officers of the recently organized Phoebe Apperson Hearst Memorial Post, No. 1197, American Legion, were installed at formal ceremonies here last night.

The installation exercises were conducted by County Commander Joseph J. Burkhard and the entire staff of county officers, and were featured by a presentation of a double set of colors to the Hearst Post by Malcolm Lunn, general manager of the New York Journal and American on behalf of a group of men and women not connected with the Legion but employed by the Hearst organization here.

W. R. Hearst, Jr., publisher of the New York Journal and American, who, with Mr. Lunn was an honor guest, thanked the post, on his own behalf and that of his father, for having selected as its name the name of William Randolph Hearst's mother, celebrated California pioneer and philanthropist.

Other honor guests included Commander A. V. S. Pickhardt, representing Read-Admiral C. H. Woodward, commandant of the third naval district and Major C. A. Pritchett, representing Major General Frank McCoy, commandant of the second corps area.

In presenting the colors, Mr. Lunn lauded Mr. Hearst as "one of the greatest Americans of all times, whose patriotism and true Americanism had never been questioned by any except subversive elements whose only interest was the overthrow of the United States democratic form of government."

Major Pritchett also praised Mr. Hearst as a "great American and a great patriot" and cited the constant fight of the Hearst newspapers for an adequate national defense and against any and all un-American organizations and activities.

Commander Pickhardt said no one appreciated Mr. Hearst's lifelong campaign for an adequate navy better than the men in the American naval service themselves.

Presiding over the session prior to and after the actual installation was the post commander, Arthur E. Pfrommer, who accepted the colors from Mr. Lunn. Other officers installed included:

Arthur H. Lehmann, first vice-commander; J. J. Sugrue, second vice-commander; J. J. Zumpkley, third vice-commander; William C. Ryan, adjutant; Warren Kelly, finance officer; Philip M. Wade, historian; Mannheim Rosenzweig, judge advocate; Frank Lee Donoghue, liaison officer; J. J. Hagen, sergeant-at-arms; Harry W. Scoggan, chaplain.

Also W. J. Hageman, M. J. Radican, Joseph V. Connolly, Peter Carroll, Kent A. Hunter, H. J. Strickland, T. E. J. Crowley, Robert Mattfeld and W. K. Seeley, executive committeemen; Capt. E. V. Rickenbacker, S. F. Miller and John Gagin, trustees; Peter Carroll, Frank Lee Donoghue and J. Mullaney, delegates to the county committee.

Lenten Season on With Church Rites

Thousands Observe Ash Wednesday In Archdiocese

Thousands in the Catholic archdiocese of Boston today observed Ash Wednesday and the advent of Lent by attending church services.

Protestant churches also joined in the observance, marking the beginning of the 40-day Lenten period.

In churches throughout Greater Boston, churchgoers received the imprint of blessed ashes on their foreheads.

Special services in more than 300 parish churches of the Boston Archdiocese will be held Wednesday, Friday and Sunday evenings during Lent.

NOVENA TO START

The meaning and significance of Lent will be emphasized in sermons and throughout the 40-day season special missions and retreats will be held.

The first of the Lenten novenas will start in scores of churches of the diocese on Friday—the Novena of Grace, in honor of and in preparation for the feast of St. Francis Xavier.

Holy communion was given at the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in downtown Boston at 8:20 a. m. Prayer and litany followed at 9:30 a. m. Shortly after noon the penitential office and an address were given by Bishop Henry Knox Sherrill.

At Trinity Church, in Copley square, holy communion was distributed for office workers at 8 a. m. and the penitential office was conducted by the Rev. Jesse Trotter at 11 a .m. The noonday sermon was delivered by the Rev. Arthur Lee Kinsolving.

EVENING PRAYER

Tonight there will be evening prayer at Trinity church at 7:45, followed by an address by the Rev. Dr. William E. Gardner. Noonday services at Trinity during Lent are scheduled daily, except Saturday, from 12:10 to 12:40 p. m.

At Emmanuel church, Holy Communion was given at 8 a. m. A service and sermon followed at 11 a. m., with the Rev. Phillips Endecott Osgood conducting.

Provision in the bill for a single civil service administrator to supplant the present three-man commission would load upon one man so many duties he could not perform all of them, Walsh said.

In place of the present bi-partisan Civil Service Commission, the bill would give a single administrator a term of 15 years, and lodge in him powers to issue regulations now reserved to the President.

Another Levine Kidnap Note Received

Asks $60,000; Boy's Plea to Pay Is Penned on Back

NEW ROCHELLE, N. Y., March 2 (AP)—A third kidnap note, stipulating the payment of $60,000 ransom and accompanied by a pleading note in the handwriting of abducted 12-year-old Peter Levine, was disclosed here today as investigators hung on the father's decision to make another radio appeal to the abductors.

The note was found Monday, it was learned, in a vacnat lot next the Bethel synagogue of Rabbi Abraham Nowak, after a mysterious telephone call directed him to the spot.

It demanded that the father, Murray Levine, a New York lawyer, make up a package of bank notes in $10, $20, $50 and $100 denominations, and drop the package at the base of a street light pole in East 172nd street, The Bronx, New York City.

HA SHAD COLD

On the back, in handwriting identified as Peter's, was scrawled the plea:

"Dear Dad: Please give these men the money. I have a bad cold. Peter."

Peter vanished on his way home from school last Thursday.

It was learned that after Rabbi Nowak was called, he summoned police and detectives and they went to the vacant lot, where Miss Evelyn Arnik, Rabbi Nowak's secretary, found the note, typed in the same style as two previous notes—all capital letters such as are found on toy dial typewriters.

DEMAND POLICE WITHDRAW

The note also told Levine just how many bills of each denomination to include in the bundle.

Levine is not a member of Rabbi Nowak's congregation and the two men were not acquainted. The rabbi expressed surprise that he had been drawn into the case.

The note also demanded that police and federal agents be withdrawn from the case.

Clue Stirs Hope for' Lost Pay Roll Plane

MANILA, March 2 (AP)—From southern Tayabas province today came the first word of the possible fate of Pilot Burton Hall, whose plane disappeared Monday on a 120-mile flight to Paracale with a $30,000 pay roll.

A former postmaster of Sariaya reported he saw a plane Monday morning flying low over Tayabas Bay. The pilot apparently trying to alight on the water, the motor missing. Hall's plane carried several lifebelts. Tayabas Bay is dotted with islands, and hope rose the aviator may be found alive.

Sen. Copeland Calls For Rigid Probe Of Subversion

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—As G-men widened their investigation into a far-reaching spy ring today, a special Senate committee prepared today to map plans for a rigid inquiry into subversive activities.

Names of more than 20 persons, until now unconnected with the arrest of three spy suspects in New York, have been obtained by federal agents, it was declared. All will be closely questioned regarding the sale of military secrets to foreign powers.

COPELAND CALLS MEETING

Senator Copeland (D.) of New York, chairman of the special committee named by Vice-President Garner for examination into subversive activities and head of the Senate commerce committee called meetings of both groups today.

The commerce committee was to act on the demand of Harry Bridges, leader of West Coast longshoremen, to be heard on charges that he has fostered Communistic propaganda and has contributed to unrest and disorder in maritime labor circles.

This meeting will be followed immediately by a conference of the members of the committee which will investigate subversive activities. Hearings are expected to be begun within two weeks, members intimated.

Britain Proposes Big Air Defense

Taxpayers Warned 5-Year Arms Plan Will Exceed $7,500,000,000

LONDON, March 2 (AP)—The British government told its taxpayers today its vast five-year rearmament pain would cost even more than the originally-planned $7,500,000,000, and warned them to expect still larger bills for defense.

Earlier, an air ministry memorandum disclosed that Britain will espend more than $500,000,000 on her air force alone in the year beginning April 1—An indication of the towering cost of Britain's determination to forge an impregnable defense for her Empire.

The air force bill, which Parliament is expected to approve, virtually doubles that of the 1937-38 fiscal year, the first year of the £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) five-year rearmament program.

Army and navy estimates will be issued tomorrow and Friday, respectively.

A government white paper, reviewing rearmament already accomplished, frankly declared:

"It must therefore be expected that even on the accuption that 1939, as now seems probable, will be the peak year for defense expenditure, the total expenditure on defense over the five years, 1937-41, will exceed the sum of 1,500,000,000 pounds mentioned in the white paper of February, 1937."

It estimated expenditures for land, sea and air rearmament for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1939, at £343,250,000 ($1,716,250,000) and acknowledged that defense appropriations for the following year would be still greater.

It listed these new warships to be laid down in 1938:

Two capital ships; one aircraft carrier; four large cruisers; three small cruisers; three submarines; three minelayers; two river gunboats; one destroyer depot ship; one submarine depot ship; one air fleet arm supply and repair ship; boom defense vessels, tugs, motor torpedo boats and miscellaneous small craft.

60 SHIPS FOR NAVY

The statement disclosed that 60 new vessels of all classes, totalling more than 130,000 tons, would join Britain's navy in the 1938-39 fiscal year.

In addition, it is said, modernization of existing fighting ships is being hurried, including four capital ships, work on one of which already is completed.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., March 1—It has been six years since you were last in Los Angeles and you remember the thought that struck you then, that it was the most cheerful looking city you ever saw. You find now, that it has not changed in that respect, though it has grown considerably since 1932.

You reflect that, perhaps, the sunshine that is nearly always spraying over this section of southern California must be largely responsible for the perennial smile that your imagination sees on the face of the city. True, it has rained a little since your arrival here, but not before there was a stretch of days of warm and golden light over Los Angeles that was worth crossing the continent to enjoy.

And you know from past experience that sunshine is the characteristic weather out here, though you like to "rib" your old acquaintances about every drop of rain that comes out of the skies.

They do not mind the "ribbing." They dismiss the occasional rain as something that must have its uses, else Providence would not have visited it upon California.

LITTLE COMPLAINING

You hear among the business men of this region little of that low moaning to which your ear has become accustomed in some other sections of the country. Business is pretty good, they say. It could be better, of course, but then business could always be better any time, any place, in the world. They seem to feel that in any event they have no kick coming and you find it is something of a relief to talk to people who feel that they have no kick coming.

It is your conjecture that no matter how business is out here, a California business man feels that he has won a bet every time he steps out of his store or home into the sunshine, and you marvel at the strange spell that this section seems to exercise over its residents. You remember the old actor who called on you the other day, a chap who roamed the world over in his heyday, and who said:

"No, I'm not working now, and I haven't worked in some time—but I'm living in California. That's something."

You reflect that it must be that the sunshine gets in the soul out here and holds them—the sunshine and the fragrant valleys and the majestic sweep of the hills and the smile on the face of Los Angeles.

EVERYBODY BUSY

You see the downtown streets teeming with traffic by day, and lighted and humming by night. You find restaurants where the cash customers are lined up at the doors for dinner, awaiting empty tables, and movie theaters in which chairs are not always available, and you say to yourself that this is quite a bustling burg.

The tavern keepers tell you that if this is not the biggest winter season in the history of Los Angeles, it is at least one of the biggest.

The hotels of the neighboring precincts, including Pasadena, are also loaded. Pasadena is hard by the Santa Anita race track and many of the cash customers are living in that city to be handy to the first race, as you conjecture.

EXPECT BIG SUMMER

The tavern keepers tell you that they are looking forward to an even better summer season this year.

You roam through the lobby of the good Baron Long's Hotel Biltmore, the leading downtown tavern, and you observe draped over the chairs and the settees, many of the famous figures of the horse racing world of the East, who have come in for the big $100,000 race Saturday. You notice that every night sounds like the night before the Kentucky Derby in the lobby of Louisville's Brown Hotel, or the Seelbach, or the Kentucky. You hear only talk of horses.

You see horse owners and trainers and newspaper writers from all parts of the country. You see fellows who are just racing fans and who travel far to see a big race for the thrill of the thing. You remember that six years ago some chap out here told you that if ever they got horse racing back in California it would be the biggest game the country had ever seen and that you laughed heartily at the idea.

You find yourself thinking that this must be the newest gold rush of American history and that if ever the recession they are talking of back East started in this direction at all, it was probably run over and smashed by one of those stream-liners that are bringing the customers into Los Angeles in such profusion that the good Baron Long is in danger of laughing himself sick.

Limerick Contest Offers Fun, Prizes

$50 in Cash and Tickets to 'Old Chicago' for Winners; Enter Now!

Fifty dollars in cash and 25 pairs of guest tickets to the Colonial Theater for the spectacular film play, "In Old Chicago."

These are the prizes awaiting Boston Evening American readers in a new contest, starting today.

Every member of the family can enter the test, which will provide plenty of entertainment as well as the opportunity to win one of the prizes.

Beginning today the Boston Evening American will publish a series of four limericks based on the highlights of the picture, which is based on the story of the great Chicago fire of October, 1871.

All you have to do is to supply the missing last line to the limerick. It's easy . . . it's fun . . . and everybody is eligible!

FIRST LIMERICK

For instance, here is the first limerick:

A cow that was stomping with ire
Caused a catastrophe dire;
Kicked a lantern, they say,
Which fell in the hay

. . . .

(You write the last line. Be sure it rhymes with the last word in the first line.)

A new limerick will appear each day up to and including Saturday.

Get right to work on your last line for today's limerick and look for the second limerick in tomorrow's paper. Mail your four completed limericks to the "IN OLD CHICAGO Limerick Contest Editor, Boston American, 5 Winthrop square, Boston, Mass.

All entries must be postmarked not later than midnight, Saturday, March 5th, 1938. Remember, do not mail single limericks. Mail all four together.

Simple, isn't it? No letters to write . . . No puzzles to solve. Entries will be judged solely on the originality and cleverness of the missing lines. Decision of the judges will be final.

HERE ARE PRIZES

Prizes will be awarded as follows:

Firist prize: $25.00 in cash for the best set of limericks, $10 cash for second best, $5 cash for third, $3 cash for fourth, $2 cash for fifth, $1 each for next five—and one pair of guest tickets to each of twenty-five other contestants sending in winning limericks.

Don't forget, Limerick No. 2 in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Foes in Austria Force Nazis Into Hiding

Ex-Heimwehr Official Tells Schuschnigg 80,000 Wait Call

By ALFRED TYRNAUER

International News Service Staff Correspondent

VIENNA, March 2—Threat of deadly political warfare today swept the swastika from the streets of Graz.

The ban on Nazi displays, after three days of veritable rebellion, was strictly enforced when Socialists, Labor, Heimwehr and monarchist parties threatened to reorganize their military formations and battle the Nazis.

Suppression of Nazi demonstrations, such as last night's defiant torchlight procession of 20,000 Austrian Hitlerites, was demanded as the alternative.

NAZIS VANISH

Dr. Alfred Seyss-Inquart, pro-Nazi minister of the interior and center of that demonstration, conferred with Nazi leaders and won their promise that the demonstrations would be discontinued.

The brown and black Nazi uniforms which had dominated Graz since Sunday disappeared as though by magic.

Major Emil Fey, former head of the Fascist Heimwehr, took an apparently decisive part in quelling the Nazis when he reportedly told Chancellor Kurt Suchschnigg that within two days he could mobilize 80,000 armed men.

SCHUSCHNIGG PLEASED

Schuschnigg, said Fey, appeared "pleased" at the idea.

In the midst of this explosive atmosphere, Chancellor Schuschnigg was expected to attempt enlisting Hungary's aid—and possibly that of Premier Mussolini—in his efforts to resist further Nazi expansion in Austria.

From Graz in lower Austria tension spread to upper Austria, near the German border, where a "German day" meeting scheduled for Sunday was cancelled by government order, throwing fresh fuel on the fires of Nazi resentment.

Officer Made Deal, Youth Tells Court

Out With Married Woman When Offer To 'Forget' Case Came Up, He Says

He was out with a married woman on the night of October 30 last, 24-year-old Robert Smith, of Revere, testified on the witness stand before Judge Edward T. Broadhurst and jury in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court today.

Smith was the first witness called in the trial of Policeman Francis X. Delaney of East Boston station, charged with soliciting and accepting a $25 gratuity or bribe. Smith, who says he was Delaney's victim, testified on the witness stand how it came about.

"I had gone to a Halloween party with a young woman," Smith related. "No, I'm not married. Yes, she is married, and the mother of one child. Well, we were coming home in my car, and on Orient avenue, on Orient Heights Hill in East Boston, I parked. I stopped the motor and turned out the lights."

"JUST SITTING TALKING"

"What were you doing in the car?" Smith was asked.

"We were just sitting there talking," he replied. "I had my arm around her shoulder.

"Suddenly, a police car drove up, and one of the officers—Delaney—got out. He came over to the car where we were sitting and flashed his light on us and knocked on the window, which was up. I lowered the window, and he said—

"'What're you doing here this time of night?'

"It was then about 1 or 1:30 a. m.

"He demanded my license and registration, and then he said:

ORDERED TO STATION

"'You'll have to go to the station. Follow us.'

"He got back into the police car and we followed them, but at the end of the street he pulled over to the curb. I stopped and he called to me:

"'Come over here; I want to talk to you.'

"I got out of the car and went over, and he said:

"'Well, what do you want to do about it?'

"I didn't say anything, and he said—

"'You know, we've got some pretty serious charges we can make against you. It'll be pretty bad for you, and the publicity will be pretty bad for the young lady.'

TELLS CAPTAIN STORY

"I didn't know what he meant—what he was talking about.

"He said—

"'Well, I don't want to put words into your mouth. But if I do you a favor I expect you to do me a favor.'

"I said, 'What kind of a favor?—a financial favor?'

"He said, 'Yes.'"

Smith testified that, not having any money with him, he arranged to meet Delaney several days later. But the next day or so, he said, he got to thinking and, finally, went to the superintendent of police's office and there told his story.

TESTIFIES OF MEETING

Police Captain Joseph Buccigross, Smith testified, gave him $25. He met Delaney, he stated, at 8 p. m. November 4 at Swift and Bennington streets, East Boston.

"It's pretty light here; follow us down a side street," Smith testified Delaney told him.

They went down a side street, Smith said, and there, he testified, he gave Delaney the money.

Steamship Line May Establish Air Base Here

Permission Granted For Experimental Hops to Europe

Federal government permission has ben granted the American Export Air line, Inc., a subsidiary, to conduct experimental flights between this country and Europe, according to word received today from Washington by the American Expart Line.

The flights will be made with a view toward establishing transatlantic air passenger and freight service, according to the local office of the steamship company.

It was also revealed that the American Export Line, Inc., has already received permits from France, Italy, Germany, Portugal, Greece and Egypt to establish terminnals for their planes in those countries.

It is understood that several experimental flying boats are already under construction for the steamship company's flying subsidiary.

PASSENGERS AND FREIGHT

The planes will have a reported capacity of 20 sleeper passengers and will also carry freight.

The line operates steamships between Mediterranean and Near East countries and Boston and New York.

These are the only American ports of call and there is a strong possibility that Boston may be made the American air base for the projected subsidiary air line.

Today Frank H. Davis, manager of the Maritime Association of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, sent to New York a telegram to President W. H. Coverdale of both companies, asking that Boston be considered as the base.

The director of the American Export Air Line, Inc., is Tommy Witchcock, famed polo player and a noted wartime flyer.

Wife Asks Details Of Jail Lashing

By PAUL GALLICO
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

BALTIMORE, March 2—The mechanics of writing a news lead are simple but sometimes they get into your hair when you have a story to tell. The news must be up front.

News: Mrs. Clyde Miller, whose husband received 20 cuts of the cat-o'-nine-tails in the city jail for wife beating, will divorce him before his six months' jail sentence is up.

Now we can get on with our story.

There we sat, the four of us, on beds and chairs in Mrs. Carrie Collier's bedroom-sitting room in her boarding house out on North Broadway.

BACK FROM HOSPITAL

There was Mrs. Collier, stout, spectacled, motherly, voluble; her pretty niece, Mrs. Miller, who had just come back from the hospital where they had taken the stitches out from under her eye, and the writer.

Mrs. Collier was the landlady. She was all landladies for all time to come. She of course sat in the rocker.

"How long did it take 'em?" Inquired Mrs. Collier, rocking comfortably.

She meant the flogging.

She had an interest, because it was she who rushed to the third floor front last Thursday night and found Mrs. Miller stretched out on the bed, unconscious, bleeding, battered, and her husband Clyde wiping his hands with a towel.

"Twenty seconds!"

TESTED BEATING TIME

"Land sakes! Is that all?" Mrs. Collier seemed dissapointed. "They musta given it to him quick. We was performing it out this morning among us, how long it would take to give a man 20 lashes. I guess I was kinda slow with the whip. It took me more'n a minute. Land sakes! Only 20 seconds. Well, I woulda thought it would have took longer."

"Did Clyde say anything?" asked Mrs. Miller.

She did not speak very distinctly because all her front teeth had been knocked out. Her face was a yellow brown from bruises, black at the eyes and the eyeballs crimson. Indistinct as her speech was it had the accent of her birthplace, Virginia.

"He just groaned and yelled a couple of times and twisted in his straps, but he didn't say anything."

EYE COLOR A QUESTION

"I guess he wouldn't," said Mrs. Miller.

Normal, she must have looked attractive with wavy brown hair. It was impossible to tell what color her eyes had been.

"Will you go back to him when he comes out, Mrs. Miller?"

She shook her grotesque-looking head. It was as though she spoke out of a carnival mask.

PINOCHLE STARTED FIGHT

"I will not. I'm going to get a divorce. In three or four weeks, as soon as I get some money, I'll get a divorce. I'm not going back again. I'll be divorced before he's out."

"What started the trouble this time, Mrs. Miller? Did you have a quarrel with Clyde?"

"It was over a card game in a tavern. Pinochle. My husband and I was partners.

"Pinochle? I thought one only quarreled over bridge."

Mrs. Miller looked knowing.

"Do you know anything about pinochle? The man he was playing against said he had a count of 13. Clyde said he didn't and called him a lot of vile names. The man was going on playing but Clyde kept on calling him vile names. So they had a fight.

UNCONSCIOUS AFTER BLOW

"They got put out in the street and the man beat Clyde up. When we got upstairs Clyde pointed to a cut on his face and said: 'I'm gonna give you what he gave me,' and hit me. After that I don't remember nothing."

Chinese Import Frogs, Eat Only The Neck

Legs Discarded as Article of Food By Orientals

Although they are not now so uncommon Chinese food delicacies of the bird's nest and antiquated egg variety have always been a source of wonder to the Western mind, however, there is one Oriental gastronomical delight that has long been imported to this port to tickle the palates of New England Chinese that has escaped notice.

Comparatively large quantities of Chinese frogs have landed on the Boston wharves destined for Chinese consumption. This in itself is not unusual you'd say because the Western world considers frogs' legs a delicacy of no mean quality.

But, you'd return quickly even with the most elementary training in economics to guide you, why import Chinese frogs, whole frogs at that, when this country abounds in the little croakers?

And your answer would be that the Chinese don't eat frog's legs.

What they do eat is a tiny bit of fat found just behind the frog's neck, and whether the American frogs have this evidence of a dissipated life in the swamplands is not known.

The fact remains that the Chinese import frogs from the homeland, and many a tasty pair of limbs winds up in the refuse can. Maybe, "not so clever these Chinese."

Air forces in other countries constitute no threat to America, it was asserted today by Colonel Arthur Goebells, U. S. Army Air Corps Reserve, on his arrival here aboard the American Export liner Excambion.

Colonel Goebells, winner of the 1927 Los Angeles-Honolulu air race, said he had been studying air forces abroad.

Aboard the Excambion were 57 passengers, 23 of whom debarked here, among them Judge Leo T. Doherty of Newton, who was returning from a tour of France, Italy and Mediterranean countries.

Prowler Routed By Baby's Cries

Screams of three-year-old Bernice Glazer today routed a prowler just as he was about to climb into the child's first-floor bedroom in Chestnut street, Cambridge.

Rushing into the room, the youngster's father, David Glazer, caught a glimpse of the prowler leaping to safety. He escaped. Glazer said the man was about 35 years old, five feet tall and wore dark clothes.

Today Bernice thought only of going out to play in the March sunshine.

"I was never so glad to hear a baby scream," Mrs. Glazer said today, in telling of the incident.

Hubby in Court Again For Same Reason

BELLINGHAM, Wash., March 2 (AP)—The case of Clyde Anable, charged with overparking, was called in Magistrate J. P. McGlinn's court.

"Have you anything to say in your own defense?" Judge McGlinn asked.

"My wife was having a baby."

"Were you ever tagged before for overtime parking?"

"Yes, about three years ago."

"What delayed you that time?"

"My wife was having a baby?"

"Good afternoon," said the judge. "See you again in about three years."

Mayor Designates Used Autos Week

FRED A. ORDWAY MAYOR TOBIN

Fred A. Ordway, president of the Boston Automobile Dealers Association and Mayor Maurice J. Tobin confer on the National Used Car Exchange Week, from March 5 to March 12. The mayor has endorsed the plan of auto manufacturers and dealers as a step toward recovery.

Industry Has Kept Faith With Public, Says Tobin

Mayor Tobin today designated next week at National Used Car Exchange Week and heartily endorsed the plan to sweep the American automobile industry out of the recession.

The mayor offered his fullest cooperation in the effort of dealers to bring prosperity to thousands of automobile workers. His aid was promised in a conference with Fred A. Ordway, president of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association.

Ordway outlined a program by which $1,250,000 will be spent in newspaper advertising in an effort to take ancient automobiles from the road and replace them with guaranteed used cars of exceptional values.

BARGAINS CITED

In boosting the Boston program, part of the national drive of the Automotive Manufacturers' Association, Mayor Tobin said:

"I believe that never before in the history of the automobile industry has it been possible to obtain so much for so little. It is the one industry that has kept faith with the public, and despite the fact that improvements in automobiles are constantly taking place, both in external appointments and mechanical performance, yet, the price paid for them is reasonable, to say the least.

NEW FAITH GIVEN

"In my humble opinion there is no better bargain possible today than a good used car. The great majority of used car dealers will not permit a car to leave the floor until it has been put in good condition. This knowledge, plus the fact that automobiles today are infinitely superior in mechanical refinements, has given the general public a new faith in the purchase of used cars.

"The automotive industry is one of the barometers of our national prosperity. I hope that the American public will take advantage of the opportunities now before them to obtain good motor cars at a most reasonable cost.

"In doing so the individual is rewarded in a thousand ways. And the possibility of general prosperity for all is increased."

Automobile dealers of Metropolitan Boston will celebrate National Used Car Exchange Week with a huge bonfire of aged vehicles, Friday night, March 11, on the marshlands along the Mystic river near the Somerville-Medford line.

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, will light the pile of cars.

Chauffeurs Win In Fall River

FALL RIVER, March 2—Within a few hours after it started, a strike by members of the Chauffers, Teamsters and Helpers' Union, A. F. of L., against three transportation companies ended today.

The companies against which the strike was declared are the Keogh Storage Company, Green Brothers' Furniture Movers and the Alden Container Company.

They were declared to have refused to sign a 1938 wage agreement on wage scales and hours, but the differences were soon ironed out.

The other 32 companies affected signed the new agreement without protest, increasing the helpers' pay by five cents an hour.

National Drive to Clear Roads of Worn Out Cars

DETROIT, March 2—Supported by President Roosevelt, the nation's automobile dealers today prepared for National Used Car Exchange Week, to be held from March 5 to 12.

Alvin Macauley, speaking for 46,000 automobile dealers, announced a concerted drive to clear the roads of unreliable and worn out machines and also clear the market of desirable used cars dealers now have in stock.

The national campaign will be launched with a $1,250,000 advertising campaign, virtually all of which will be spent in the newspaper field.

With the used market cleared, Macauley pointed out, a substantial increase in auto manufacturing will result in giving employment to thousands of workers.

"The motor car industry," Macauley said, "is generally credited with showing the way out of the last depression.

"Today, the automotive industry is launching a similar campaign. Until present stocks of used cars are cleared it is impossible for dealers to handle a normal volume of new-car business.

"The best used cars in the nation's history are now available. We are confident that the used car stocks will be reduced sharply by the drive and that a new boom in motor manufacture will result."

400 B. U. Alumni Join in Drive For Building

$1,500,000 Campaign Gets Underway March 14

More than 400 alumni of the Boston University College of Business Administration in the Boston area have been enlisted to assist in the campaign for a new $1,150,000 College of Business Administration building.

Under the chairmanship of George F. Grandi of Marlboro, the local committee members and more than 200 others in New England and the rest of the country, have been preparing for the drive, which opens March 14.

Assisting Mr. Grandi on the executive committee are John Waters, chairman, special gifts committee; James M. Mosely, chairman, publicity committee; Jack O. Cohen, chairman, lists committee; John F. O'Brien, chairman, speakers' bureau, and F. Glenn Rink, chairman, events committee.

The proposed new Boston University building will be the first to be erected on the Charles River campus between Commonwealth avenue and Bay State road near the Cottage Farm bridge. According to plans the structure will be six stories high in its main section and two stories high in the wing which extends toward the Charles River. This wing will house the auditorium with a seating capacity of 1500 persons.

Fall River Wife Held in Killing

FALL RIVER, March 2—Charged with the murder of her 30-year-old husband, Wilfred, a WPA laborer, Mrs. Alma Bedard, 25, was held without bail when arraigned today in second district court.

The woman, alleged to have stabbed her husband to death during a quarrel at their home in Rodman street, pleaded not guilty through her counsel, Benjamin Horvitz.

Judge J. Edward Lajoie set March 15 as the date for hearing and ordered that Mrs. Bedard be held meanwhile in New Bedford jail.

Before starting for New Bedford, a request that she be allowed to see the body of the man she is accused of slaying was granted to Mrs. Bedard.

Accompanied by two police lieutenants she was taken to the Armand Auclair Funeral Home, in Broadway, where she wept softly upon viewing her husband's features. Then she knelt and said some prayers before being taken away.

Relatives of the slain man announced funeral services would be held tomorrow with a solemn high mass of requiem in St. Anne's Church. Burial will be in Notre Dame Cemetery.

Betty Alden on Beacon Hill

Lengthy Social Program to Mark Gay Week-End at Harvard

By BETTY ALDEN

OVER IN HARVARD yard the coming week-end has no special title like prom week or winter carnival . . . yet Boston girls, as well as those who are coming on from schools and colleges all over the East, will find a full schedule awaiting them . . .

They will have such a merry whirl of entertainment and dances that they will probably choose their own name for the occasion . . . and will in the future refer to it as "that wonderful week-end at Harvard" . . .

LEDLIE LAUGHLIN

The festivities will start Thursday evening with the round of dinners and cocktail parties which will precede the large dance at Lowell House . . . The following evening comes the annual costume party at the Hasty Pudding Clubhouse . . . which will probably continue until the rosy light of dawn glints on the spiked helmets of the Larz Anderson bridge . . .

After the weary revellers have had an early morning snack, wriggled out of their costumes and climbed into their trundle beds, it will seem like only an hour or two before they will be up again, rubbing their sleepy eyes and dressing in sports clothes for a trip to Boston Garden . . . for the Harvard-Yale hockey game . . .

All the most popular debs and post debs have been invited to the Hasty Pudding costume dance . . . and in addition to the Bostonians there are quite a few from the eastern colleges and New York and Long Island . . .

Ledlie Laughlin of Concord is coming home from Bryn Mawr especially for the dance, and Harriet Miller, one of this season's debs will be home from Vassar Friday in time to hustle into a humorous costume and hurry off to a dinner party before the dance . . .

The fame of Hasty Pudding dances has spread so far and wide that girls think nothing of coming from all points of the compass to be "among those present" . . . and lest Boston debs think they have a monopoly on the boys across the Charles, here is a list of some of the out-of-town girls coming for this year's dance . . .

It includes Eleanor Whitman of Greenwich, Louise Pettit of Germantown, Katherine Pell of Westbury, L. I.; Sally Ann Chapman of Overbrook, Pa.; Margot Reid of Chicago, Gertrude Le Boutillier of Jericho, L. I.; Jane Gilbert of Paris, France; Dorothy Bullitt of Chestnut Hill, Pa.; Bertha Forbes of Tampa, Florida; Margaret Drury of Newport, Jean Randolph of Charlottesville, Pa.; Mary Chapman of New London, Ct.;Ann Berger of Pittsburgh and Frances Moore of Jackson, N. H. . . .

Still others will be Mary Evarts, Zoe Thorne, Barbara Winlock, Laura Smith, Jane Delano, Ruth Burchell, Gertrude Rikes and Katherine Irving of New York City . . . Rose Harmon of Smith College, Mary B. Gardner of Camden, Me.; Elizabeth Stillman and Clement Browne of Vassar, Cornelia Kellogg of Bryn Mawr, Frances Potter of Smith, Worthington Kite and Patricia Wilson of Wheaton, Eleanor Little of Sarah Lawrence, Jane Stillwell of Bennington, Mary Fiske of Wellesley and Betsey Durham of Sweet Briar College . . .

Fashionable Group at Board Meeting

CLOTHES MAY MAKE the man . . . but they don't make the chairman . . . Mrs. Alfred V. Kidder, 2nd, did an expert and efficient job presiding at the regular meeting of the Ladies Aid of the Infants' Hospital at the hospital yesterday morning . . . yet her clothes had none of the matronly severity usually associated with "Madame Chairman" . . . Quite to the contrary, she looked like a post-deb in a becoming brown wool frock trimmed with bands of mink to match her coat and her modish mink trimmed turban . . .

Among the prominent members of the Ladies Aid who sat around the long table in the library, attending to the business of the month, were Mrs. Francis I. Amory, Mrs. Carleton Pike, who chose a dress of light green to offset her mink coat and novel hat of beige and brown checks . . . Mrs. Lawrence Foster and Mrs. Harrison Reynolds attended together . . . the latter in a gay spring-like costume of hyacinth blue with a black turban trimmed with a scarf of the same blue combined with cherry red . . .

Mrs. George Swift attended with daughter, Lucille, who is one of the new members of the committee . . . Lucille was the essence of chic in a fitted black Persian coat with a wide suede belt and a novel hat which was simply a long scarf of scarlet velvet wound around her hair with one end draped around her throat and hanging down in back like a scarf . . .

Mrs. Amor Hollingsworth and her daughter, Evelyn, were another fashionable mother and daughter pair present . . . both wore black costumes lavishly trimmed with fur and brightened with corsages of brilliant flowers . . . Still others present were Mrs. Charles F. Hovey, Mrs. Marshall Fabyan, Jr., Mrs. Alexander H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. F. Wadsworth Busk, Miss Josephine Emery, Mrs. Frederick M. Dearborn, Jr., Susan Brewer and Mrs. S. Huntington Wolcott . . .

Style Show at the Somerset

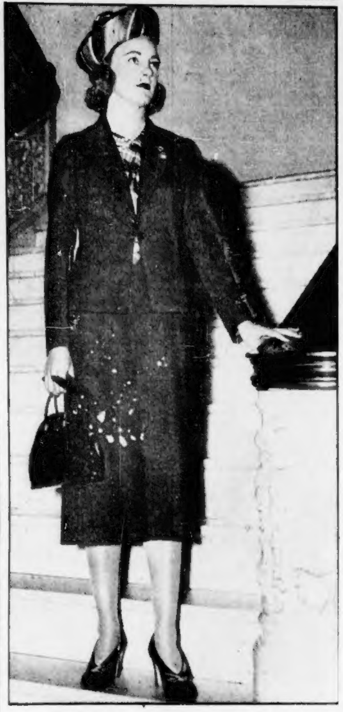
MRS. HARVEY BUNDY, Mrs. Frederick Bradlee, Jr., Mrs. Christian Herter and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson were a fashionable foursome at one of the many tea tables in the Hotel Somerset Ballroom yesterday afternoon, where Mrs. John A. Tuckerman conducted the first of the lavish spring fashion shows . . .

Madame Emma Ames, famous opera singer of a few years ago, was a guest of Mrs. Tuckerman and at a nearby table Mrs. Samuel Warren and her sister, Mrs. William Tudor Gardiner, applauded warmly when Mrs. Warren's daughter, Mrs. Frederick Richardson, Jr., modelled a number of fascinating costumes . . .

Mrs. Ben P. P. Moseley sat with Mrs. Albert C. Burrage, Jr., and Mrs. Daniel de Menocal at the end of the runway where they had a splendid view of Ellen Moseley modelling several costumes which inspired Harry Marshard and his boys to strike up "The Easter Parade" . . . Mrs. Forrester A. Clark and Mrs. Roger W. Cutler, Jr., were two of the other attractive models . . . together with Eleanor Frothingham, Lucy and Nancy Cochrane, Mrs. Arthur T. Lyman, Mrs. Reginald C. Foster, Mrs. B. Young Hamlen, Mrs. Charles Devens, Mrs. Robert Emmons, Marietta Howe, Phyllis Howe, Dorothy Potter and Anne Tuckerman . . .

Olivia Ames attended with Olivia Vogel and Elizabeth Motley . . . Still others in the audience were Mrs. William Davis Taylor with Mrs. B. Davis Crowninshield, Charlotte Ives, Mrs. Nathaniel Simpkins, Mrs. Alfred McIntyre, Mrs. Hamilton Osgood 2nd, and a trio of North Shore girls which included Mrs. James Parker 2nd, Mrs. Jefferson Davis and Mrs. Channing Frothingham, Jr. . . .

It's Fashion Study Time For Socialites



MRS. B. YOUNG HAMLEN'S attractive navy blue suit with a blouse of stripped taffeta in vivid colors and a rolled brim turban of the same silk was one of the highlights of fashion show presented in the Somerset ballroom yesterday afternoon by Mrs. John A. Tuckerman of Union Park.

DOROTHY POTTER modelled a dirndl of printed cotton with a fetching pair of red taffeta culottes forming an underskirt, a costume which would come in handy for a resort trousseau. Many members of society's young set acted as models at the Somerset event.

Infant Saviour Guild Sponsors Show

Spring Fashions Are Shown

Smooth fashions modelled by smart mannequins and an afternoon of bridge is a winning combination this season in the world of benefit parties. With all eyes turned toward spring, no diversion is more welcome.

Everyone turned out for the first show of the season held by the Guild of Infant Saviour yesterday at the Copley-Plaza. With the box office in mind, every age and size was represented in the sartorial scheme of things.

Mrs. Frank Grady of Medford showed togs which any matron would love. Dark-haired vivacious Betty Reardon showed the younger set the fine points of spring styles but the extremely young Nancy O'Rourke of Woburn stole the afternoon's limelight parading the daintiest of clothes for Miss Six-Year-Old.

HEADED COMMITTEE

Mrs. James P. O'Hare and Mrs. Frederick O'Brien are experienced hands at staging fashion shows, having chalked up several successful summer ones at the Hatherly Country Club. Mrs. O'Hare chose a navy blue ensemble while Mrs. O'Brien could easily join any style parade so smart was she in her black ensemble and twin silver foxes.

Mrs. Daniel Kelly of Cambridge offered both her untiring support, her slate blue crepe faggoted and combined with velvet while Mrs. Edward Goode made a pretty mid-afternoon speech bidding for the support of her party, a night at the Pops on May 14.

The Commonwealth's First Lady viewed the fashions from her seat skirting the midway where she was entertained by Mrs. William Hinchey of Woburn.

MRS. THOMAS E. BURKE

Aids Benefit

From Winchester Chapter, which is holding its own parade on March 11 at the Winchester Country Club, came a good-sized contingent. Among them were Mrs. James Gaffney, whose young niece could give any older model a lesson in poise, and Mrs. Richard O'Rourke, whose black wool coat was banded in Persian.

Event Attracts Notables

PEACOCK CREPE GOWN

From South Boston came Mrs. James Regan, the untiring chairman of the attractive vendors, who traded chances for coins to aid the guild's charity work. Mrs. Regan's peacock crepe was edged with crisp white ruching, bright flowers adorning her flat sailor.

Enthusiastic support was given by Mrs. William Baxter, her blue crepe scrolled in a white design, Mrs. James Caine of West Newton and Mrs. John Casey, whose navy bolero topped a powder blue blouse. Others assisting were Mrs. George Genter of Roslindale and Mrs. Michael Stapleton and Mrs. Thomas Burke of West Medford, blue ostrich tips nodding on her black felt bonnet.

OUT OF TOWN GUESTS

In this day of so much traveling, the fashion show proved an unexpected meeting spot for many who have returned from their midwinter vacations. Marie O'Connell made her first appearance after her Mediterranean cruise, while Mrs. Edward L. Kickham entertained her sister, Mrs. John Dempsey of Washington, who is spending a fortnight in our town.

Mrs. David Posner had Mrs. P. J. O'Connell as her guest. Mrs. Thomas Feeny of Medford entertained her daughter, Mrs. E. Corbett Walsh, while the business of ticket-taking and money accounting had been detailed, as usual, to Molly Corcoran and Mrs. George McCarthy, whose black costumes sported pert trimmings of white.

Rooney Alumnae Plan Fashion Show, Bridge

The need for an Easter bonnet or for something new in the clothes line is the idea behind plans for Mary Frances Rooney School of Elocution bridge and fashion show Saturday, March 11, at the Hotel Vendome.

Both graduates and undergraduates alike have responded to the clarion call. Mrs. Thomas Dolan of Woburn, general chairman of the party, is being enthusiastically supported by Barbara Viano of Somerville, Katherine Erwin of Braintree, Kathryn Travers of Roslindale, Margaret McDonald of Brighton and Ruth Taylor of Jamaica Plain.

Novelties have been planned by Muriel O'Brien of Somerville, Cecilian Carroll of Medford, Mrs. John Finn of Cambridge, Mrs. George Oleson of Cambridge and Irene Ryan of Jamaica Plain.

Anna Murphy of Milton will entertain a large group of friends at the scholarship benefit party while others making reservations are Virginia Lane of Dorchester, Kathleen Sullivan of Newton, Virginia Kenny of Boston, Mary Hart of Cambridge, Muriel O'Brien of Somerville and Eleanor Noonan of Salem.

SKIING in the warm sunshine of late winter is the skiers paradise, a fact which accounts for the heavy exodus of sportsmen to the mountains this coming week-end. Among the latest additions to the crowd which will make Overlook the center of their operations are the John Yerxas and Clara Dupee, who will be joined by Rachel Warner and a large group of ardent skiers.

Joan Ryerson's Engagement to Be Announced

Mrs. Donald M. Ryerson, of Lake Forest, Ill., is announcing tonight the engagement of her daughter, Joan Ryerson, to George W. W. Brewster, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. George W. W. Brewster, of 213 Beacon street, Boston.

Miss Ryerson graduated from Foxcroft School and studied a year in Paris . . . She made her debut in Chicago in 1936 and since has been studying writing in Cambridge.

She is a niece of Mrs. Donald McKay Frost of Dover, and a cousin of Mrs. Nathaniel Clark (Jane Frost) of Dover, and Mrs. Austin B. Osgood (Mary Frost) of Westwood. Her cousin, Joseph T. Ryerson, Jr., of Chicago, married the former Marie Ducey of Boston, in 1936.

Mr. Brewster graduated from Harvard with the class of 1929 and studied at M. I. T. Architectural School . . . He later received a degree at the Harvard Architectural School and is now practising in Boston.

Following their marriage on May 21, the couple will live in Boston.

BOSTON after DARK

By GEORGE HOLLAND

GAG ABOUT THE HORSES and how they are finishing at Santa Anita has dominated many of the important radio periods originating in Hollywood . . . Horse-racing is considered a two-way threat to the motion picture industry, because (a) it keeps patrons away from matinees, and (b) it attracts dollars which might have been spent at the theater wickets . . . Consequently, although it has not reached the proportions of "a movement" as yet, Boston theater operators are muttering.

Their plaint is that the individuals who are giving inestimable publicity to horse-racing and the wagering are stars of the silver sheet and the sound-tracks . . . Moreover, because of the huge rewards of radio, many of these stars are remaining in the film capital "between pictures". . . Were it not for radio, several of these important stars would be available for "personal appearance" bookings at major film-houses when not engaged in making pictures . . . Something, from a Boston source, is going to be done about it.

* * *

SORROW OF ANOTHER SORT:

Picture-making is involved in a different kind of complaint . . . It seems that the manufacturers of men's and boys' caps have banded together and engaged a "public relations counsel," one Hal A. Salzman . . . In a trade paper Mr. Salzman says the cap industry is "faced with possible extinction" principally because the public has come to believe "that only gangsters wear caps" . . .

How has the public hit upon such a conclusion? . . . "Well dressed men aren't wearing caps any more in the movies," argues Mr. Salzman. "The place where they do see caps are on the heads of movie gangsters."

* * *

ONCE OVER LIGHTLY:

Dr. George Winchester of Dorchester is planning to quit the bachelor ranks, and the young lady who is wearing the doctor's ring is Miss Grace Strausser . . . As "Graycella" of "Theodore and Graycella," the Mrs. Winchester-to-be trouped the variety stages for several years . . . She played Boston as part of the Sonja Henie ice-ballet, where an acquaintance with the Dorchester dentist was renewed.

Mayor William F. Kane of Woburn got off to a bad start in his radio address . . . "Too much publicity has been given a remedy for stamping out drunkenness," the Woburn mayor said in "his lead" . . . He meant "means" not "remedy" . . . The cage-idea for inebriates was introduced with hilarious results as a feature of the Bradford Penthouse show last night . . . The Cambridge Prep Club will give a dinner-dance at the Mayfair tomorrow night.

A preview of "Love, Honor and Obey," a new Warners picture, reveals pretty Priscilla Lane as undoubted starring-material—even though Miss Lane's duties include an assignment to sing "Bei Mir Bist Du Schoen" . . . And when "Sally, Irene and Mary" bows in at the Metropolitan tomorrow, Jimmy (The Nose) Durante will be found up to his old tricks—stealing the show . . . In a much smaller role than his role in "The President Vanishes," Durante is excellent.

One music-lover, a woman, has passed two entire theatrical days (from opening until closing) in the Fine Arts Theater, where "The Life and Loves of Beethoven" is being shown . . . Joe Dineen's book, "Ward 8," is enjoying a sudden vogue at the Massachusetts Historical Society, where the editor and his friends are trying—two years after the book came off the press—to identify the author's fictional characters as real-life persons . . . Edwin Burr Pettet, recently of Jasper Deeter's Hedgerow Theater, is in town in an endeavor to form a year-round professional Repertory Theater . . . The talk is that Lawrence Mullin, the young Boston College thespian who played in "The Music-Makers" at the Copley Theater, is altogether too talented to remain in the amateur ranks.

With John J. Dillon as president, South Boston's newly-chartered Independent Club will hold its first Guest Day—guess when! . . . That's correct . . . The William A. Glynn Associates of Roxbury danced at Winslow Hall last night . . . Two young men, Daniel W. Warren, Jr., a graduate of Amherst Aggies, and George S. Baldwin, a broker, are contending for a place on the Brookline board of park commissioners . . . The Brookline polling happens next Tuesday.

Darrieux Set for Debut

HOLLYWOOD, March 2—Danielle Darrieux begins work in ten days so Hollywood can stop worrying over Universal's expensive delay in starting her first picture, "The Rage of Paris."

It has been estimated the salary paid her, without ever facing a camera, has been over $50,000. Charlie Rogers has been urged to loan her to other studios but wisely, I think, has preferred to let the French star make her American debut with Universal.

Louella O. Parsons

Young Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., who within the last year has become one of our top leading men, returns from New York for the co-starring role with Darrieux. Interesting too, that Henry Koster, who was largely responsible for Deanna Durbin's meteoric rise, will megaphone while Buddy De Sylva is named as the producer.

* * *

* * *

William Powell's friend's were shocked to hear that he would enter the Cedars of Lebanon hospital for a serious operation. Dr. Clarence Moore will operate for an intestinal obstruction and it is hoped that Bill, whose health hasn't been very good the last year, will be greatly improved.

* * *

Eddie Robinson's popular radio show, "Big Town," may be the subject of a motion picture just as "Hollywood Hotel" was after it became well known as an air show. Columbia is greatly interested in the idea of making a picture of "Big Town" as a sort of sequel to "The Whole Town's Talking" a corking comedy which starred Robinson several years ago.

Slapsie Maxie Rosenbloom isn't bragging about his movie career any more—he's just raving now that he's set for roles in "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse" and "Racing Form" with George Raft at Para . . . Look for an avalanche of spy yarns since the recent espionage arrests in headlines. RKO is already dickering for "Cipher Bureau," a story by Arthur Hoerl and Monte Schaff.

Snapshots of Hollywood

The on-again-off-again romance of BINNIE BARNES and JEAN NEGELUSCO has been resumed; JOAN CRAWFORD lunching with SHIRLEY TEMPLE today, the date having been arranged by GEORGE MURPHY at MISS CRAWFORD'S request. Yep, she's a Temple fan; ROSA PONSELLE choo-chooed into town with her bridegroom, CARL JACKSON, son of the mayor of Baltimore.

ERROL FLYNN'S butler, who has been with him since he entered the movies, now becomes a stock player at Warners. ERROL hopes he will act as well as he buttled; PEGGY HOPKINS streamlinering back to New York. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Poor Schnozzola---Beauteous Alice

"Ouch," cries Grumpy as he bumps his schnozzola in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," which tomorrow enters its fourth week at the RKO Keith Memorial.

Alice Faye provides heart interest in that screen masterpiece, "In Old Chicago," now in its third week at the Colonial. It is based on the famous fire.

Popular Prices At Fine Arts

In conjunction with the fourth week of "The Life and Loves of Beethoven" and the added attraction, "The River," the management of the Fine Arts Theater announces new popular prices: from 12:30 p. m. to 1:00, all seats, 30 cents; from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m., all seats, 40 cents; after 5 p. m., all seats, 55 cents. Children at all times, 15 cents. These prices will prevail daily and Sundays.

Celia Adler's Screen Debut

Miss Celia Adler, world-famous Jewish actress makes her screen debut in the motion picture, "Where Is My Child," which will be shown at the Majestic Theater for one week, beginning tomorrow evening.

As an added attraction, Miss Adler will appear on the stage in person following each showing in a sketch especially written for her and entitled, "Ellis Island."

English titles convey the story clearly to those unfamiliar with the Yiddish dialogue.

Mae West Film At the Uptown

"Every Day's A Holiday," starring Mae West, is the top attraction at the Uptown beginning Friday. Edmund Lowe, Charles Butterworth, Charles Winninger, Walter Catlett, Lloyd Nolan, Herman Bing, Chester Conklin and Louis Armstrong make up the chief supporting players.

Triple Bowdoin Bill

Starting today, the Bowdoin offers a special triple bill "Beg, Borrow or Steal," with Frank Morgan, John Beal and Florence Rice; "Thank You, Mr. Moto," with Peter Lorre, and "Partners in Crime," with William Boyd.

New Play Booked at Wilbur

"Spring Thaw," the new Clare Kummer comedy in which Roland Young has the stellar role, begins a week's engagement at the Wilbur Theater Monday evening, March 14, whence it goes to Broadway for the New York premiere. This is another Max Gordon production who is now currently represented on Broadway by Clare Boothe's "The Women" and Katherine Dayton's "Save Me The Waltz."

"Spring Thaw" reunites the star, playwright and producer who jointly combined to make an outstanding success of "Her Master's Voice," a gay comedy of some five seasons back which won both critical acclaim and a long Broadway stay.

Incidentally, the new opus brings Roland Young back to the living theater after a long sojourn in the Hollywood and London film colonies, where he appeared before the cameras in such fine story material as "Topper," "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" and "Sailing Along."

Arthur Hopkins, celebrated producer, will direct "Spring Thaw." The settings will come from the workshop of the imaginative Donald Oenslager, and the costumes are by Bianca Stroock.

During its local stay, matinee performances will be given on Wednesday and Saturday at a popular price scale.

Muni's 'Scarface' For New Gayety

Because of popular demand the New Gayety Theater screen offers "Scarface," starring Paul Muni, as the ace criminal who kills with a smile and fears nobody. Prominent in the cast are George Raft, Ann Dvorak and Karen Morley.

On the same program is "Love in a Bungalow," with Kent Taylor and Nan Grey. This program opens tomorrow and continues through Saturday.

An entire new amateur stage show will be the special attraction tomorrow evening. Sunday, the New Gayety opens with "The Awful Truth," smash hit of the season starring Cary Grant and Irene Dunne.

Excellent Coffee Enjoyed by Everyone

FROM MARTHA LEE'S WEDNESDAY MORNING BROADCAST OVER STATION WMEX

By MARTHA LEE

We take the good things that life offers too much for granted these days, don't you think? For example a good cup of coffee today is every man's morning pleasure.

Coffee was brought to America quite early. In 1683, we find that William Penn paid $4.68 a pound for it in New York for his Delaware settlers.

The American colonies copied the mother country and coffee houses soon opened in Boston, New York and Philadelphia.

The Green Dragon in Boston was one of the most famous. It was a political and social center for 135 years; it figured in national affairs from 1697 to 1832. And Daniel Webster called the Green Dragon the "headquarters" of the Revolution.

So much for the history lesson today. If you are as fond of the rich flavor of coffee as we are, you will want to use it in cooking as well as making a beverage. Coffee (or Mocha, if you prefer) flavored desserts rate high as a midwinter choice, so brew an extra cup of coffee today and try one of these recipes.

COFFEE NUT CAKE

½ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons water
2 eggs
¾ cup chopped nuts
2 cups flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup strong coffee

Cream shortening, stir in sugar gradually and cream together until fluffy. Add water to eggs and beat until light. Add to creamed mixture slowly and beat. Add nuts and blend. Stir in flour, which has been sifted with baking power and salt, adding the flour mixture alternately with the coffee, beating until smooth. Pour batter into two eight-inch greased layer cake pans and bake in a moderate oven, 375 F. thirty to thirty-five minutes. Cover with Mocha Frosting.

MOCHA FROSTING

1-3 cup shortening
4 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon salt
1 ounce unsweetened chocolate, melted
1-3 cup strong coffee

Cream shortening with half of the sugar, adding the sugar gradually. Add vanilla, salt and chocolate and mix well. Stir in the remaining sugar alternately with the coffee until the right consistency to spread. Beat well after each addition.

COFFEE FLUFF

1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup hot water
1 cup strong coffee
¼ cup heavy cream
3 tablespoons powdered sugar
½ cup chopped nuts

Dissolve gelatin in hot water. Add coffee. Pour one-half mixture into mold. Whip remaining gelatin when slightly thickened. Fold in whipped cream, sugar, nuts. Pour on clear gelatin. Chill. Serves 4.

COFFEE CARNIVAL

1½ cups water
1-3 cup tapioca
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1-3 cup seedless raisins or dates
1 cup strong coffee
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup cream, whipped

Place water in top of double boiler and bring to a boil over direct heat. Combine dry ingredients; add gradually to water and cook 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from boiling water—mixture clears and thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, add coffee and vanilla. Chill, fold in cream. Serve in sherbet glasses. Serves 6.

Are Your Feet Free as Air?

DANCING FEET . . . playing feet that pedal bicycles (like Eleanor Powell's most famous ones) gaily and madly on island coral or New England crushed clamshells . . . even feet that do nothing much more strenuous than some lazy truckin' in the evenin' . . . are apt to step into a skin infection that's called "athlete's foot," and does pretty serious things physically and mentally. Arline Gould tells of a remarkable discovery that is said to cure long-entrenched cases and to do it permanently!

New Athlete's Foot Cream Relieves Severest Cases

By ARLINE GOULD

A ROUSING game of ping pong may be the whole extent of your athletic activity, but that doesn't mean you can't come down with as severe a case of Athlete's Foot as the modern equivalent of a Greek runner with muscles like taut cords . . .

So easily transferred that it's rampant even where you'd least expect it, this affliction is one that's not only peculiarly painful physically but mentally. You can imagine the breathless excitement in this department at finding a cream that is said not only to cure Athlete's Foot completely, but to guarantee its never recurring again!

Epidermophytosis is one alias the affliction goes under. It affects the layers of the skin, usually below the ankle joint, though it's been known to spread like wildfire on the fingers and other parts of the body.

* * *

The whole thing is blamed on a minute form of plant life—a fungus—with a cell wall so tough that antiseptics, according to one university authority, "are virtually useless." Club dressing rooms, pools, boardwalks—any place a bare foot, like Man Friday's, may step and leave its mark, visible or invisible—are hangouts of the vicious fungus.

So you can see just how momentous this discovery is—the most innocuous-looking cream with a clean, antiseptic odor—for it is said at last to penetrate the affected skin layers and heal them forever.

Naturally, we're not let in on the secret of the astounding ingredient that does this. But it is said to penetrate to the depths of the fungus-attached area, into the watery vesicles that are surrounded by tough cell-wall, and there to reach and to destroy the fungus.

Five- to seven days—there's something almost biblical in the sound of it—is the time allotted to the cream to do its remarkable work. The treatment isn't the least bit involved, but it will take a certain amount of patience and care to see that the minutest detail isn't left undone.

* * *

We will be glad to tell you all about this brand new discovery for treating athlete's foot—a generous jar costs only around a dollar, and there is a leaflet which guides you through the simple routine—just phone Arline Gould LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Glamour May Be Acquired Easily

IDA JEAN KAIN

It has been said that no woman is to blame for not being beautiful at 16, but that she has only herself to blame if she is not beautiful at 30.

How close this comes to being the truth is perfectly illustrated by many of the famous movie stars. For examples there are Bette Davis, Norma Shearer, Myrna Loy, Irene Dunne and even Garbo.

That any of these actresses was in the ugly duckling class at 16 seems very unlikely, but within the past few years their beauty has grown amazingly.

The evolution of Bette Davis as a glamour girl should be an inspiration to every woman who was not born beautiful. Miss Davis is a self-made beauty if there ever was one. Her most noticeable points are her hair, posture and poise, all the products of cultivation. This fine actress does not consider herself a beauty and we love her for it—but she is wrong!

Myrna Loy has capitalized on naturalness and is far lovelier today than when she played the role of an oriental siren. Men regard Myrna Loy as the perfect wife and half the nation's husbands are secretly in love with her.

Joan Crawford has done as much for herself as any girl in the movies or out of them. In this poised actress it would be hard to recognize any trace of the hey-hey girl she used to be. She has improved in every way. Her recognition as one of the screen's leading beauties is well deserved.

One of the most amazing things about these stars is that they are all in their thirties or thereabouts, and that they are the biggest box office draws in pictures. The years have taken no toll of their looks. On the contrary, there is not one of them who has not grown more lovely each year.

The beauty factors on which movie stars concentrate are: Healthy condition of the hair and a flattering coiffure; the development of a musical speaking voice; perfection of figure and posture. No one is born with these charms. They must be acquired.

In Hollywood beauty is a serious business and a 24-hour day job. The results advertise themselves. Beauty is not that important to the average woman, but any woman profits immeasureably from a program in which her time for beauty is budgeted. You can spend one hour each day in the open air.

You can take 15 minutes for the corrective exercise your figure needs. You can get in 100 strokes with the good old hairbrush and see that your skin is kept meticulously clean, so that your complexion will be fine-grained and lovely. You can do all these things, and if you will do them you can grow better looking each year.

There are specific exercises to correct every disproportionate measurement. There is a leaflet of "Bust Reducing Exercises," and another entitled "Bust Development Exercises." "Waistlines and Beltlines" take care of excess waist. The leaflet, "Hips, Hips, Away," will slim down this measurement. There are "Leg Normalizing Exercises" and "Facial Gymnastics." Write today for the leaflets you need, enclosing a large return envelope with plenty of postage, and begin your beauty program at once. Every day can count.

Fun, Fantasy In Settings

"DECORATION in 1938 is not the past, it is YOU," declares Harper's Bazaar. "Today, you place a gadget from Woolworth's beside a Renoir, and remove the price tags from both. You are not lacking in reverence for old things, but you are tough with them; age is not enough. You mix the old with the new, the functional with the fantastic and—unlike Queen Victoria—you are amused. You like bright clear color, whether it comes to you from the past, from nature or from the palettes of the great painters of the day."

Youth, movement, accent, color, no price tags and a touch of autobiography are the important elements in decoration today, Harper's Bazaar declares in its February issue, which devotes several pages to trends in interior decoration.

"Finally," concludes Harper's Bazaar, "a house must have a wake—because no house where everything is brand new has any character. A house without some reflection of the past is not a complete house.

From the Novel by Clements Ripley

CHAPTER [illegible]

[illegible] "Oh! I see. Well, thank you [illegible] your good intentions." Serena turned to the door.

"Oh, say! Honestly—I did bring them for you! Look here, youngster, what's the matter?"

He was instantly sorry he'd said that. Even if it was Serena you wouldn't call this tall, slim young woman with the hard, cool eyes "youngster." "If you'll tell me what kind of dress you're going to wear, I'll go get you some now!"

She laughed. "Oh, I'm having dinner in my room. Aunt Rosanne had her table all balanced—she couldn't change it at the last minute."

[illegible] laughed [illegible] "Nobody [illegible] aloud "but a Yankee could make one bunch of flowers go as far as that!" Then she burst into tears.

[illegible]

"HORSE-TRADING"

"Well, gentlemen?" A big man with a [illegible] "Let's get down to business! What we need right now is money. Fifty thousand dollars'll buy any legislature in the United States. Say seventy thousand. All right—my crowd'll put up fifteen thousand each!"

It was what they wanted. The [illegible] A piece of horse-trading [illegible]

[illegible] The Harrigan interests might come [illegible] make it five [illegible] occasional notes [illegible] Ferris, what's your crowd going to do?"

Ralph's mouth tightened a trifle. "Why, gentlemen," he said, "I don't think we're going to do anything."

Pandemonium! "Why, your Golden Moon's the one they're specially hittin' at!"

Ralph nodded soberly. "I'm not denyin' it. It looks bad."

He got to his feet. "Gentlemen," he said, "I've heard you with interest. Business is no Sunday school, but—as a Californian—as an American—as a gentleman, there are some things I can't do. Bribery is one!"

"YOU'RE SO WONDERFUL"

He looked around the thunderstruck circle. "Gentlemen, count the Ferris interests out."

There was a buzz as he walked out. Ralph paused outside where the pretty typist was [illegible] over her note-book. "Get it?" he said.

"Every word!" She yearned up at him, eyes adoring. "It—it was wonderful! If that doesn't get you into the Senate, nothing will! Oh, darling!" she whispered. "You're so wonderful—"

He pulled some notes out of his pocket—leaned over. "I'd like you to make a transcript of this, Miss Ferguson," he said aloud.

And under his breath: "It's the amounts each crowd was willing to put up to buy legislators. Get it to me right away. Send Crouch to me in my private office. You little clown, don't look at me like that! No tellin' who's watching!"

• • •

A queer sort of hanger-on was T. C. Crouch. A fat man with glassy eyes, a long underlip. Nobody knew exactly how he lived [illegible] suit was always a little [illegible] He was always just about to conclude some mysterious "deal."

For an hour he was closeted with Ralph Ferris. Then he left on the night boat for Sacramento.

Ralph bit the end off a fresh cigar. "By the way, Whitney," he [illegible] "Golden Moon'll hit bottom tomorrow. I'm buying—you might buy some, too. Sure, the bank'll take care of you—I'll see 'em."

• • •

T. C. Crouch appeared at Fanny Brown's in Sacramento.

Sometime in the 60's a homesick Louisiana man had built himself a house with intricate iron galleries and a curved staircase, the house was Fanny Brown's House now.

[illegible] the general [illegible] anything about [illegible]

A strange sort of Puritan, Fanny Brown [illegible] Not the railroad lobby itself could have opened that house on Sunday.

[illegible] there was [illegible] on beneath the crystal chandeliers.

T. C. Crouch was enjoying himself. The seedy gray suit had disappeared. In its place was new and [illegible] black broadcloth. [illegible] around T. C. Crouch.

[illegible] lobbyists pot in the back room T. C. Crouch was opening champagne.

As a matter of fact, he was pretty drunk, so drunk that Fanny Brown took occasion to remind him that he was a family man with a wife and [illegible]

[illegible] papers which had fallen [illegible] his pockets. They could hardly help seeing what the papers were.

EVERYBODY BUYS

Every one was a buying order for Golden Moon Mine. Big lots! And they were signed by Ralph Ferris, Harrison McCooy—practically everybody of importance in the mining crowd.

T. C. Crouch sobered up later. He was [illegible] he might have violated some confidence. He asked that nothing he had said be mentioned outside. As he patted his pockets to be sure he had lost nothing, Fanny Brown sent for a cab. He left a buzz behind him.

Next morning Golden Moon was being bought in Sacramento. The news swept through the Legislature like a prairie fire. Ralph Ferris, McCooy, a dozen others were buying Golden Moon at the [illegible] The valley ranchers [illegible] "Ralph Ferris knew what he was doing!"

A week later T. C. Crouch came back to Fanny Brown's. This time it was in the morning and T. C. Crouch was completely sober. There was a brief talk.

Dodging the Lead

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

There is no other type of bridge contest which affords as much pleasure and interest for the spectator as team-of-four matches.

The comparison of results at the two tables puts a truly scientific stamp on the proceedings.

The bidding:

At both tables the play went as follows:

West opened the king of spades and when East played the seven and declarer false-carded the six, the spade ace was cashed. On East's failure to echo, West shifted to the diamond ten. Declarer won and drew three rounds of hearts, then cashed the two remaining diamonds and the queen of spades, discarding a club from dummy. Now with spades and diamonds stripped from the North-South hands both declarers led a club and went right up with the ace.

At one table East made the "normal" follow-suit play with the nine-spot and [illegible] discarded his own losing club.

At the other table East refused to be trapped. When declarer played dummy's ace of clubs East [illegible] threw his king on the trick. He realized that if South had [illegible] but, by the same token, if South had that card no defense could be successful.

The one thing that East could guard against was being thrown on lead and forced to make a ruinous return. This, East did by unblocking his club king.

Declarer was now helpless. He could not return to his own hand without using his last trump. Since West still had a spade, it would do no good to do this in order to lead a club toward the jack.

As his only hope declarer led a low club from dummy praying that East had had the king-queen blank. But West overtook East's nine-spot with the ten and cashed the queen, for the setting trick.

TOPLOFTY bonnets that [illegible] their all [illegible] the highest point [illegible] head seem to be leveling everything [illegible] They started sometime back with the skull-hugging calot [illegible] in every case. Then with the riotous rush of a jungle blooming, things began to sprout on top. And now we're hearing of New York products that feature a garniture of assorted flowers and gilt brushed feathers in a veritable hanging garden over the brow. Knits are never behind in the style race, and so it's with much delight that we present the pattern of one of the youngest of the toplofty tribe. It has a brush of yarn held over the eyes. Treatment of Asthma

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

THERE ARE said to be more than a half million cases of asthma in America. There is no doubt this number would be even greater were it not for the advances made in its treatment.

Asthma is a peculiar disease. It is not caused by a germ or infection. The vast majority of cases are due to a peculiar sensitivity to certain substances.

Persons who possess this unpleasant sensitivity are said to be "allergic." They have attacks of spasmodic breathing when exposed to that substance to which they are sensitive.

This sensitivity may well be a hereditary condition. This is believed to be the case because asthma is usually found in families in which the same affliction has been [illegible]

SOURCES OF ATTACKS

The victim of asthma may be sensitive to a food, to a pollen, or one of many other things, some of them seemingly [illegible] Contact with the offending substance brings on an attack.

In severe cases even indirect exposure to this substance may bring about a reaction. These allergic individuals are always in fear of an attack. If you have ever witnessed a sufferer from asthma in an attack, you can readily understand this fear.

Most persons have the mistaken idea that asthma is an incurable disease. It is by no means incurable.

How can we treat this condition? First, it is necessary to determine exactly the substance which is producing the trouble. By means of the so-called "scratch tests" or "skin tests," which I have described before, it is possible to find it.

Married Comrades

MOTHER GRAHAM SYMPATHETIC

CHAPTER 543

MY mother-in-law, as does her son, often surprises me with an unexpected [illegible] in a situation where I naturally might expect disapproval and antagonism.

It would have been perfectly natural for her to have evinced displeasure at the dilemma, so hateful to me, which entailed my pretending affectionate daughterly solicitude for Allen Drake while he impersonated my father.

Indeed, I had expected such a reaction on her part when Allen knocked upon my door, addressing me as "Niece Margaret," and saying that he must talk to me at once. And it was with bewilderment, mingled with gratitude, that I turned and kissed her before going out of the door.

"Don't be an idiot just because you know how'," she quoted, but her voice held a kindly intonation, and I went out of the door with a warm glow at my heart instead of the gloom which had settled over my spirits at Allen Drake's [illegible]

When I reached the stairs Lillian's voice sounded behind me, not softly, but in accents that could well be heard in the rooms below.

"Tell your—father—that you have only just begun your breakfast. He will excuse you, I know, to come back and finish it."

DRAKE HEARS LILLIAN

That Mr. Drake had heard her I knew by his sudden appearance at the door of the library as I came down the lower corridor.

"Good morning!" he said, punctiliously. "I couldn't help hearing Lillian. Where were you having breakfast?"

"In my room."

"Have you changed your custom of rallying everybody around the breakfast table?" he asked in tones inaudible a few feet away. "Do you lock your guests into their rooms now and send them trays?"

There was mockery in both his voice and his smile, and I realized that he comprehended perfectly my distaste for his teasing and my consequent determination that he should have his meals served in his room while he was supposed to be an invalid.

But I was determined that he should not guess my knowledge of his mental processes or [illegible] acknowledge [illegible] teasing which had actuated my insistence [illegible] Katie. With a tremendous effort, I kept my voice and my face calm with apparent child-like innocence.

"Oh, no, we all come down to the breakfast table, as always," I said. "But, of course, illness alters everything. Lillian worried unnecessarily over my fatigue, and ordered breakfast to be served to both of us in my room, in order, I think, that she might make me eat what she considers a sufficient breakfast—an ample one, I assure you."

"I agree with Lillian," he said suddenly. "You must finish that breakfast. But [illegible] would it upset your faithful handmaiden in the kitchen [illegible]"

EXPECTS INCONVENIENCES

I reflected that it would probably upset Katie far less than it would me, but aloud, I only said with unruffled voice:

"It really doesn't matter under the circumstances whether she is upset or not. And she expects all sorts of unusual occurrences at this time. I will tell her to serve my breakfast in here."

But as I turned toward the kitchen, Mr. Drake made a swift forward movement, and put a compelling hand upon my arm.

"You will do no such thing," he said imperatively. "You will go on into the library and sit down. I will take the message to Garcia."

His hand fell from my arm, and before I could answer him he was striding toward the kitchen, and I walked into the library.

Mother's First Duty Belongs To Baby

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

You never have to tell a stepmother what is the world's most difficult job. She knows. In fact, she has the world's most difficult job.

In the years that I have conducted this department I have had problems of every kind and description brought to my attention.

But, without the slightest hesitation, I confer the award for having the hardest possible task on the average stepmother.

Her work is considered particularly difficult when she has children of her own. I could cite hundreds of examples of this, but that is unnecessary. The following letter from a Melrose woman whom I pity from the bottom of my heart, is typical:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I've tried for over a year to bring my husband's daughters closer to me but it seems impossible.

I'm [illegible] 22 years old and my [illegible] to be devotedly in love with me.

But when I reason with the girls, whose ages are 10, 13 and 14, and try to make them behave and help a little, my husband gets mad.

I do all my own housework and the girls refuse to do anything except wash the dinner dishes, and my husband wants me to do them [illegible]

SHE BUYS IT HERSELF

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Recently I've become engaged to a very sweet girl, and we hope to be married within a few weeks. Now [illegible]

[illegible] were running things that men now bought their brides' wedding clothes, veils and trousseaus.

I'd like to know if this is so or if these boys were just razzing me.

MY DEAR SON:

They also pay for the wedding breakfast or whatever refreshments are offered at the wedding reception, if one is held.

Why Does Success Succeed?

By ELSIE ROBINSON

There's an old adage which burns Al Wilson up. To wit: "NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS."

"Is that fair?" boils Al. "Why should people who have everything already, be given more? Take yourself, for example, or any columnist. You people get things printed in all kinds of places without any trouble, yet I can't get a single story accepted, although everyone says it's swell stuff.

"I wrote this story five years ago. I've sent it to every editor in America since and they won't even look at it. I can prove that because I pasted two pages together and they were never opened.

"But you slobs can get fat checks for everything you write."

Yes, it's an actual letter. Sounds a little heated, doesn't it? Yet, actually, it represents the average citizen's attitude toward the irritating maxim—"NOTHING SUCCEEDS LIKE SUCCESS."

Down the street, in the sleekest, swiftest imported foreign model, rolls the Big Shot. At ten that Big Shot was a ragged urchin selling papers on the corner. Today he [illegible] grand with more ease than you or I [illegible] a dime.

"IS THAT FAIR?" say we and Al, green-eyed [illegible] our own unrewarded [illegible]

Yes—strange as it may seem—it is fair.

"Nothing DOES succeed like success" . . . 'Unto him that hath, shall be given, and he shall have abundance.'

Maddening as such maxims sound, they're both true and just. And it isn't because God plays favorites . . . it's simply because success, in itself, is a proof of what you have and what you deserve.

There are, of course, seeming exceptions. People who appear to get everything without trying. Lucky breaks. But such exceptions do not demonstrate real or lasting success.

The luck that's handed to you is just scenery. As unreal as a Hollywood "set"—and as unsatisfactory. It gives no lasting power nor heart-deep happiness.

The ONLY success that you can bank on—the only success that succeeds—IS THE LUCK YOU MAKE FOR YOURSELF.

Why does that success succeed? Why, for example, [illegible] a successful columnist's articles—and [illegible] than the amateur's?

It's not because the columnist can flash a bank roll . . . it's because he's taken a beating . . . he's been through the mill . . . he's had the conceit and laziness and nutty notions pounded out of him and he can now be trusted to produce the goods.

REAL SUCCESS IS A LOGICAL CONSEQUENCE, NOT A LUCKY ACCIDENT.

Real success doesn't mean selling stories or insurance or bonds or dry goods. It means all the discipline that goes before and with such sales . . . the disappointments and humiliations, the double-crossings and dirty deals . . . and the ability to take all this and yet fight on without bitterness or pouts.

WHY DOES NOTHING SUCCEED LIKE SUCCESS? WHY DOES "HE WHO HATH" GET MORE GIVEN UNTO HIM? That's why. Because genuine success is a 100 per cent proof of a survival of the spunkiest.

Referring again to "us slobs," no successful writer ever wrote one story in five years and then sat crying in Mama's lap while it was being refused.

He realized, to begin with, that no first story was ever worth the paper it covered—and that any editor would discover the fact in two paragraphs without wading through to those "pasted pages."

And he'd go plugging along regardless of rejections until he either reached the goal or got hep to the fact that, as an author he was a good ditch-digger.

Nothing succeeds like success—

Because

NO ONE SUCCEEDS LIKE THE GUY WHO CAN TAKE IT.

HOME INSTITUTE

INDOOR GARDENING

Amazing—these little glass gardens! You can grow a miniature forest in one—from tiny trees to tinier ferns. Or turn it into a nursery for cuttings. Or make it a hothouse for the exotic orchid.

No fuss or bother. You simply line the bottom of your container with moss—placing it so the green shows outside. Then you add soil or fibre, put in seeds or plants and let the terrarium do the rest of the job.

The glass top shuts dry air out, keeps air inside so evenly warm and moist you rarely need to add water.

Right now you can get a thrill starting new ferns. Peg down the runners from your house plants with hairpins as in sketch.

Move the little plants to the terrarium when rooted. For a colorful [illegible] add a heliotrope [illegible]

Fun too to experiment. Try wild flowers, grasses, weeds. Startling how the lowly chickweed turns exotic under glass.

And now what about a tall jar of apple blossoms and bridal wreath? Easy to force branches of any flowering tree or shrub into early bloom by keeping them in water in a humid spot.

Many more pointers on indoor gardens and terrariums are given in our 40-page booklet, SUCCESS WITH HOUSE PLANTS AND FLOWERS. Tips on spring and summer care.

[illegible] said Whit [illegible]

"Indeed," Mr. Prentiss [illegible]

[illegible] that this [illegible] marriage [illegible] And that your presence here with the apparent intention of further entrapping my infatuated son—"

"Just a minute, Mr. Prentiss," Brad [illegible]. But Sheila was ahead of him. She faced Whit's father with blazing eyes.

"The [illegible]! Don't dare talk that way to my sister, Mr. Prentiss." [illegible] drew back a little, [illegible] indignant surprise. "[illegible] assuming [illegible] anybody wants [illegible] And the only reason [illegible] taken the first steps [illegible] is because we have a [illegible] consideration for Patsy."

Mr. Prentiss [illegible]

"[illegible] I am happy to hear I [illegible]. In that case [illegible] to arrange [illegible] there has [illegible] marriage [illegible] Miss Kelly. I can see your sister is a charming girl [illegible] but there are considerations of tradition, of custom, of family—"

"I don't think I get you," Mr. Prentiss [illegible] interrupted Sheila with a dangerously sweet smile. "The Kelly family is certainly as old as your own and just as respected. What's more, if you really want to start matching ancestors, I haven't a doubt [illegible] one out ahead."

"[illegible]," said Whit's father. "And why do you think that?"

"I [illegible]," said Sheila. "[illegible] on, Patsy, let's get out of here."

"I'm [illegible]," Sheila [illegible] Brad. "I [illegible] anything like this will [illegible] me up."

"Oh," said Sheila, "of course not. But I'm glad [illegible]. It's made me realize something. Good-bye, Brad, and thanks."

"Good-bye, Whit," said Patsy.

"[illegible] Sheila," the [illegible] closed on Brad's [illegible].

BRAD [illegible] on Whit's father.

"I wish [illegible] were [illegible] years [illegible]. You and your [illegible]"

[illegible]

"I'm sorry, T[illegible]." There was [illegible] regret in the elder Prentiss' [illegible]. "I don't understand. If there's anything—"

"What a [illegible]." It was Whit, excitement cracking his voice. "K[illegible] Oh, [illegible]. This must be [illegible] Patsy was [illegible] my father [illegible] Get me everything [illegible]"

"What?" Bristling, his father [illegible] sheet of heavy note paper Whit handed him. "Why [illegible] where did you get [illegible]"

"Patsy slipped it to me before she left," said Whit wearily. Then he began to laugh. "How [illegible] appointment now?" he asked.

The paper shook in Mr. Prentiss' hands.

"[illegible]," he said, holding [illegible]. "It must be a forgery. [illegible] It's Her Grace [illegible] But [illegible] Whitney, this is horrible! How [illegible] I make such a mistake. You must persuade them to return. I must apologize. Why, Whitney, I'll be a laughing stock."

"You certainly will," said his son, "if it ever gets around."

"You arouse my curiosity," said Brad. "What's it all about?"

For answer Whit handed him the letter that had so profoundly affected the elder Prentiss.

Under an ancient ducal crest and the superscription "Kinmea Castle, [illegible]," he read:

"My dear cousin Patricia: I must tell you at once of the most exciting [illegible] I have just made. You remember [illegible] the young Prentiss man? Well, I have just learned the most amusing thing! He is a distant American relative of the [illegible] Barnwall. And the founder of the Barnwall house was the second husband of your great great grandmother, eight generations removed. That's Bridget, daughter of the twelfth earl. You and [illegible] of course are descended from her previous marriage to [illegible] O'Donn[illegible], the first earl of Tyrconne, who was a true Irishman and paid for it with the loss of his estates. Barnwall, on the other hand, was really a nobody and we are not proud of Bridget for marrying him. It seems to me, in view of what you told me, that this is almost as exciting as our discovery that the Tyrconne line is still extant, thanks to your grandmother's survival of that wreck. It is all most romantic and breathlessly exciting. I do hope . . ." The rest was devoted chiefly to a hope that Patsy and her mother would shortly be able to revisit Kinmea. It was signed, "Your loving cousin, Geraldine [illegible], [illegible] of Leinster."

"But I [illegible] understand," Higginson Barnwall Prentiss was saying, "how such a thing could be without anyone knowing it. I'm familiar, of course, with most of the genealogical details. I naturally would be [illegible]."

"I think I can enlighten you," said Brad, "though I don't know that I should. Sheila told me something about it. Some sort of a mystery about her grandmother. It started with a shipwreck off Cohasset."

"The St. John," said Mr. Prentiss, who knew his Boston history.

"[illegible]," [illegible] Sheila's grandmother [illegible] a survivor [illegible] parents [illegible]. She was raised in an orphanage and [illegible] earned her name. But there was a locket about her neck, Sheila said, with some kind of Gaelic words on it. Let's see, the motto under that crest, [illegible] that's it. Mrs. Kelly was going to look into the mystery during her recent trip to Ireland and I suppose this is the result . . . But what of it?"

"I didn't need any credentials to know Sheila rated a coat-of-arms. All you've got to do is look at either of those girls. [illegible] their family outranks yours, Mr. Prentiss." . . . That's distinctly amusing."

But Mr. Prentiss didn't look as if he thought it amusing.

"The best blood in the kingdom!" he groaned. "And I practically insulted her."

"That, little man," said Brad, sadly, "isn't half what you did today."

* * *

THREE days went by. Three days during which Brad made a half-dozen futile attempts to see Sheila—to explain to her that Whit's father wasn't typical of his friends, that the man was a hopeless Anglophile, that she wouldn't meet many like him in real Boston society.

But Sheila had been deeply affronted. The whole scene had enraged her, heated her fierce family pride to the boiling point. She was now intent only on persuading Patsy to renounce Whit. And she knew she couldn't consistently do that unless she, too, renounced Brad. Altogether and definitely.

Besides that, Jerry O'Donovan was taking up the better portion of Sheila's time.

Mickey's exoneration had been a triumph for Jerry in more ways than one.

It silenced his political critics, marked him out as the man to sweep Boston clean of lawless rackets and murderous racketeers.

Big men began to seek him out. He was called into a conference of the governor, the mayor, legislative leaders and the prosecuting authorities—asked to map out a campaign against a growing wave of graft and crime.

There was talk of making him a harmony candidate for Congress at the next election, with even higher office on the horizon.

[illegible] political observers of all factions, it was apparent that young, fighting Councilor Gerald O'Donovan was going places. And that it might be a good idea to get on the bandwagon early, before it was loaded.

So Jerry forged swiftly to the front, gaining not only friends and political allies but confidence.

Confidence enough to decide, among other things, that it was time for a showdown with Sheila.

[illegible] to get her definite "Yes" . . . but [illegible] set a date for the wedding.

And Sheila's [illegible] attitude had something [illegible] with that confidence. He could sense the change that [illegible] with her lessening of interest in Brad. She was more like the Sheila of [illegible] days before the [illegible] of the Taltons had [illegible] the scene.

Jerry was glad [illegible] had happened that way. He'd felt all along that Sheila [illegible] be [illegible] Talton. Not that there was so much wrong with Brad himself. It was his crowd. She'd never be happy with a gang like that. They'd make a fuss over her [illegible] there wouldn't be any place for the [illegible].

With him there would be. He was going high, but he'd never go high enough that he couldn't take them all with him. Because he knew them, knew there wasn't any place high enough for people like that.

He began to think in terms of the future, of all the things he could do for his city and state, [illegible] the steps [illegible] he would have to take [illegible] them.

[illegible] he'd manage them [illegible] the State House and beyond. Where [illegible]leys and Hurleys had trod, an O'Donovan could. It wouldn't sound bad at that: Governor O'Donovan. And he could do it, if he planned well and carried it through.

Yet it wasn't by any plan that he found himself alone in the Governor's office with Sheila, giving him the chance to say what he'd been waiting to say.

It was just one of those things. She'd been called back to her old department at the State House to take care of some emergency filing and he'd met her in a corridor as he was leaving a legislative meeting with Attorney General Paul A. Dever.

"We're on our way to the governor's office," he said after introducing her to his companion. "Come along. [illegible] five minutes, then I can take you home."

But the Governor had just gone and presently Mr. Dever also stepped out.

"How do you like this little spot, Kelly dear?" Jerry asked.

Sheila surveyed the executive chamber judicially.

"I was just thinking," she said with a smile, "what a [illegible] it was that you had to meet me down at Park street. Because it wouldn't have [illegible] if you'd been seen [illegible]."

"[illegible]," grinned Jerry. "As [illegible] hopes. [illegible] of Boston. Some day, if I can guess the changes fast enough, I hope to be sitting in that piece of furniture."

"I'm absolutely sure of it," said Sheila. "Why don't you try it out now?"

"Bad luck," said Jerry. "You try it instead. Go ahead. I'll guarantee nothing will happen to you."

So for a brief moment Sheila's golden, delicate-limbed loveliness lightened the ponderous bulk of the gubernatorial chair.

"It's a little large," she said. "More your size, I'm afraid."

But Jerry was staring past her, out the window, into the lengthening shadows.

"Sheila," he said, gravely, "I want to tell you something. I'm just egotistical enough to think I've got a chance of sitting in that chair some day. But—as sure as you breathe—it won't mean a plugged nickel to me unless you're beside me . . . And unless we walk down the State House steps together inauguration day, too!"

She looked up at him from the vastness of her perch, mistiness in her eyes, her lips sweetly curved.

"It would certainly beat waiting for you at Park street," she said thoughtfully. "Particularly, if you stood me up like . . ."

"Darling." She felt herself whirled into his arms. "There'll be no more waiting anywhere for us! Oh, Kelly, Kelly, my own dear, true love."

"Be careful, dearest," Sheila breathed presently. "You'll hurt your sore shoulder . . . Jerry. Oh, dear, I'm so terribly happy."

The faded portrait of former Governor Talton stared down at them from the wall, expressionless, unamused.

* * *

DAN CARROLL'S party, celebrating Mickey's vindication, was in full swing at Ruby Foo's restaurant on Hudson street.

Brad, invited largely at Jerry's insistence, had promised to attend. But his place was still vacant as Vince, delegated master of ceremonies, arose to state that he had a rather important announcement.

"This won't be news to the family," he said, "but I imagine it will be to some of the others present. It has to do with an impending wedding. You all know that Jerry O'Donovan wins elections and cases. But he doesn't stop there. He also wins girls. She's sitting next to him. I give you a toast, everybody. Miss Sheila Kelly—a June bride."

It was at that moment Brad entered.

He stood motionless, like a man in a trance, while attentive waiters relieved him of his wraps.

"Oh," thought Sheila, [illegible], "why did it have to happen this way?"

But Brad's paralysis was brief. Slowly his chin went up in the old eager way, his teeth gleamed in the old expectant smile.

"Hold everything," he called. "Let me in on that. This is swell!" Andrew B. Lee, assistant manager and recently returned Chinese war flier, [illegible]. Brad shook hands with him, exchanged a few words, joined in the toast.

"Sorry I was so late," he apologized as he took his vacant seat. "You see, I'm packing. Leaving by plane in an hour. Just time to make the China Clipper."

"So you're going to China," said Barney Kelly. "Well, I [illegible] when my daughter told me about your sister. How is she?"

"Doing fine," said Brad. "Still I feel I can be of help being there. [illegible]"

"You did a great job for my boy, Mr. Talton," said Barney Kelly. "There's nothing I can give you, but if there's anything I can do for you at any time, just say so."

Brad grinned, darted a look at Sheila.

"Well, Mr. Kelly, I'm glad to hear you say that. Because there's something you can do. I've a friend out here [illegible]. His name's Whit Prentiss. I want you to give your blessing to his marriage to your daughter Patsy."

Barney Kelly frowned. His wife nudged him.

"You'll break Patsy's heart if you don't, father," she whispered.

"Very good," Barney Kelly rumbled in a deep voice that rolled through the restaurant. "My word's my word. My daughter can marry this Prentiss man. But it's got to be in church."

Patsy and Sheila ran to their father together, kissed him on either cheek.

Brad nodded to Miss Ruby Foo, proprietor of the restaurant, and she smilingly produced Whit Prentiss from an inner office.

"Any church you say, Mr. Kelly," said Whit. "Come here, Patsy."

Vince arose.

"Well, folks," he said, "I now have to announce a double church wedding."

* * *

THE party was over, the guests leaving.

Brad, Whit, Sheila, Patsy, Jerry were among the last. Brad shook hands with them all.

"Good-bye," he said. "I wish you all the luck in the world. And as I won't be here for the wedding, I'll kiss both the brides now." Which he proceeded to do, while Jerry frowned.

As he left, some invisible signal passed through the restaurant. The waiters stood at attention stiffly.

"Ray! Ray! Ray!" It was a fast Oriental version of three rousing cheers.

Brad waved. Vanished.

"Goodness!" said Sheila, still flushed. "I didn't know even a Talton rated all that."

"That," said Miss Foo, no longer smiling, "was not just for a Talton. That was for the gallant Bradford Cabot Talton, who leaves tonight to fight with the brave air forces of China! May victory be with him."

"Oh!" said Sheila, staring at the empty door. "Oh, Brad! I hope so!"

HERE ARE THE RULES

NAME THE MOVIES consists of 49 pictures containing the scrambled names of movie players. This game is open to all bona fide residents of New England—except employes of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser and members of their families.

A picture containing the scrambled name of a movie player will be published every week-day in the Boston Evening American until 49 have appeared. Rearrange the letters in each picture so that they spell the name of a movie player. Use every letter in the picture. Write or print the name on the line allotted or on a piece of paper. DO NOT SEND IN SEPARATE PICTURES. Save your answers until you have a complete set of 49.

Send your completed solutions by FIRST CLASS MAIL to "Movie Stars," Boston American, P. O. Box [illegible], 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Massachusetts. A letter with your name and address MUST accompany your entry. This letter must also include not more than 50 words on who is your favorite movie star and why. Letters will be considered only in the cases of ties in naming these stars. All entries must be in the Boston American office by midnight [illegible] days after the last picture No. 49 has appeared.

Entries will be judged by a committee chosen by the Boston American. All entrants agree that the judges' decision must be final. Prizes will be paid to the persons sending in the nearest correctly solved and complete sets of unscrambled names. Neither elaborateness nor handwriting will be considered in making the award. In the event of a tie between or among two or more entrants for any of the prizes, the prize or prizes next in order will be combined in a lump sum and then evenly distributed among those tying.

GIRL About TOWN

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

If the crowd which gathers midday at Exeter and Boylston streets is any criterion subway building is as fascinating as steam-shoveling.

Marguerite Downey

If it's sheer curiosity luring you to the spot and not the satisfaction of watching some one work, Girl About Town suggests your ... Mr Davis of the Transit Commission. He has some interesting information to offer.

Number one is that the subway, although a short one extending only from Boylston st to the other side of Mechanics Building is causing the city engineers a heap of trouble. The type of marshy soil in that section of the city is the reason. Two ... have to be removed before the foundation is laid on firm clay which is found about 34 feet underground.

THIS Is LIFE

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

Old Harbor Village, in South Boston, cost nearly seven million dollars and there isn't a door bell in the place as yet.

The cause of the omission was partly economy—Roosevelt economy for door bells of course add perceptibly to the costs of a seven million dollar shack. And partly it was to keep peddlers out.

Robert E. Rogers

By Federal order all front doors have to be kept permanently closed. On the front doors, there are no door bells. On the apartment doors there are no buzzers.

If one intends to call upon a friend in Old Harbor he can do one of three things, he can telephone for an appointment, he can write for an appointment, or he can stand under the window if he knows which window and can whistle, sing or cat-call until the key is dropped.

And then probably the Federal Bureau of Investigation will pinch him for disturbing the peace or something.

This little contretemps was apparently not an accident like the time when Balzac had put up an outside staircase on his house Les Jardies because he had forgotten to build an inner one.

[illegible] ... seemed ... [illegible] ... way of keeping beggars and peddlers out.

The result is that nobody can get in. It's rather like the zealous young man who ... three times before breakfast. Query: What did he wear for breakfast? How do the victims of this bright idea get in their own houses if they forget their keys?

No, it obviously wasn't an oversight. No, we planned it that way. And the reason why we planned it that way ... invariably ... government ... hand in hand with government ... These people who are to live in South Boston will virtually become wards of the Federal Government.

True, for the moderate rent they pay, they can get all kinds of architectural and mechanical and electrical gadgets and luxuries which they couldn't possibly afford if they lived in an ordinary apartment where they could have some freedom—freedom to share ... mope out the windows and keep their perambulators in the front halls and have ... hear their visiting friends ring doorbells. But as Patrick Henry said on a famous occasion ...

... have ... for house or barn ... in addition ... an electric range.

Now an electric range is rather expensive cooking. I've had one and I know. These people don't want one. They want an old fashioned wood-burning stove that will cook and warm at the same time. But the government says No electric range, no ...

This ... like the dear dead days ... beyond recall when Rex Tugwell was ... complete ... regulation ... rigid ... and interference with American citizens whose only fault is that they happen to be poor and see a chance to better their condition.

Situation Like Chesterton Fable

It is like Chesterton's fable in "What's Wrong With the World" about the little girl with beautiful golden hair that unfortunately had nits ...

Authority passed on the case. Instead of cleansing the child's hair authority had it cut off. Simple, economical and authoritative. The exercise of the right of government over the individual. Nazist, Fascist, Bolshevist.

That virus is in the New Deal Administration particularly in its efforts at the Uplift. This latest comic contretemps by which the prisoners in Old Harbor Village were not to be allowed to answer their own door bells or shoo the peddler out is just another example of the old disease which is spelled B-u-r-e-a-u-c-r-a-c-y. Better learn to spell it. You'll be needing it.

Complaints Are Heard Elsewhere

We are beginning to hear of that kind of thing elsewhere and with increasing frequency. For instance down in the T V A country people are getting cheap electric power and light at rates which are ruining private enterprise. They can have completely ... equipped homes. All they have to do is sign a paper. No fuss, no bother, no worry.

But there's a catch in it. These people discover that they can't ...

Hospital Heads Oppose Lottery

Because millions of dollars are spent annually in this state on lotteries which benefit hospitals of foreign countries or ... a lottery to support Massachusetts hospitals was urged at a State House hearing today.

Representative Albert Rubin of Fall River appeared before the legislative committee on public welfare in support of his measure which would provide for the establishment of a lottery commission to regulate lotteries by hospitals in this state.

Opposing the proposed legislation, Dr. Charles Wilinsky, representing the Massachusetts Hospital Association, and Dr. Joseph Howland, president of the Hospital Council of Boston, declared such lotteries would not solve the financial problems of hospitals.

"Everyone is willing to gamble," the Fall River legislator said. "Why not let them spend their money in a worthy cause—support of our hospitals."

Under the terms of the bill two lotteries would be held each month with only one lottery permitted to an individual hospital in any one month.

What Has Happened:

En route to Bermuda via plane on a secret investigation of the disappearance of Judy Fortier, secretary to Barnard Grafton, capitalist, Major Roger Allenby meets C. "Didn't pan out?" ... "Why, what do you mean, Mr. Grafton?"

Alcohol Killing 100 a Year Here Says Dr. Leary

Medical Examiner Battles for Bill to Curb Its Sale

Since the repeal of prohibition the death rate from alcoholism in Suffolk County has been a hundred a year, Dr. Timothy Leary, medical examiner of the Southern ... of Suffolk for ... years, told the legislative committee ... [illegible]

[illegible]

SEES BOOTLEG RETURN

[illegible]

"If you pass this law you are inviting the return of the bootlegger and the kitchen barroom, and you will again have the conditions we had before the repeal of prohibition.

"Its passage means the return of bootleg alcohol and poison alcohol.

"You can't change human nature. I believe no doctor can tell whether a person suffering from alcoholism got that way from the use of alcohol as such.

"I believe no physician can tell whether a person who died from alcoholism died from the use of alcohol as such."

DEADLY AMOUNT

Speaking at length to emphasize what he termed an alarming condition, Dr. Leary declared:

"Massachusetts is the only state where this alcohol can be purchased in containers of less than a gallon over the drug store counter without a prescription.

"Only half of one per cent of the alcohol in the brain means certain death. The danger comes when men become intoxicated and do not dilute ethyl alcohol sufficiently. The condition is terribly disturbing to me."

The medical examiner told the ... that the alcohol is sold ostensibly for chemical, mechanical or medicinal purposes, but charged that 95 per cent of the amount sold was as a beverage.

"If we had an epidemic of disease in Massachusetts that resulted in such a tremendous death rate, the entire country would be alarmed," he said. "Because death was due to alcohol, no attention is paid to it."

... favoring the measure were ... Henry F. R. Watts ... Thomas Da... agent for the city, and ... Young representing the Massachusetts Package Stores Association.

Radioland Reflections

By N. F. T.

THERE'S goodly wireless fare for the Wednesday evening waiting schedule variety to say the least

'Not the least striking of the air attractions for tonight or any mid-week "mike" effort for that matter is the "Cavalcade of America" half hour (WEEI) due again at 8 o'clock.

It's to be the story of Helen Kellar that indomitable personality we[illegible] wn to the world for having made a place for herself in life despite the handicaps that total deafness and blindness have imposed since birth Such presentation in dramatized form will also honor the life and career of Anne Sullivan Macy life-long friend and teacher of Helen Kellar [illegible] to [illegible] and until her passing from life in 1936 Miss Kellar plans to be present and to broadcast during the program this evening

EDDIE SHORE ART ROSS TINY THOMPSON

His decision to remain in Boston certainly went well with his two oldest stars as they held a reunion with Art Ross after hearing the great news. Eddie Shore, left, and Tiny Thompson, right, are the only members of Art's old gang remaining. It has been a great triumvirate. Play-offs next!

This ends the strong rumors in regard to his supposed shift to Chicago. Nobody is happier than Adams, either.

—INTRODUCING—

Rookies With 1938 Red Sox

[illegible]

TODAY—THE BOSTON RED SOX

PITCHER JAMES CHARLES BAGBY, bought from Hazleton. Jim is a son of Jim Bagby who won thirty games for Cleveland in 1920. Young Jim, by the way, was born in Cleveland when his father was one of the Indian aces. Although he was but 21 years of age last September, James has been pitching professionally for three years. Won 13 and lost 9 for Charlotte in 1935, taking part in 40 games. Did not do so well for Rocky Mount in 1936, winning 9 and losing 12. But, in 1937, in the N. Y. & P. league, he won 21 and lost only 8 games. Struck out 113 batsmen and batted .330. Like his famous father, Jim is a right hander. His dad did not coach him until he had had two years in the minors. Then he taught him how to throw the knuckle ball. Jim is six feet two inches in height and weighs close to 180 pounds. He was voted the most valuable player in his league in 1937.

OUTFIELDER ROBERT FRANCIS DAUGHTERS, recalled from Rocky Mount, N. C. Bob was attending Holy Cross a year ago at this time, leaving to join the Red Sox in Florida and returning in September so as to obtain his degree. Bob is big and fast. Burned up the paths in semi-pro games around Boston and in the Adirondacks and stole 26 bases for Rocky Mount.

OUTFIELDER FREDERICK LINDSAY DEAL, recalled from Little Rock where he batted .310 in 72 games. Attended Lenoir-Rhyne college before turning pro.

CATCHER GEORGE DICKEY, recalled from Minneapolis. Brother of Bill Dickey of the New York Yankees but lacks Bill's batting ability, hitting but .247 in 91 games with the Millers.

PITCHER EMERY DICKMAN, recalled from Little Rock where he won 26 and lost 8 games in 1937, allowing 163 hits in 32 games, fanning 80 and walking 50. Dickman, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., attended Washington and Lee where he was a member of the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity. A six-footer who has control and a good pitching head.

PITCHER JOSEPH M. GONZALES, purchased from San Diego. Attended University of Southern California. Won one and lost two games for the Red Sox last fall.

BOB DAUGHTERS

PITCHER JAMES FRANCIS HENRY, recalled from Minneapolis where he won 11 and lost 11. Pitched 20[illegible] innings, allowing 2[illegible] hits, struck out 99 and passed 11[illegible]. Credited with one victory and no defeats for Boston. Earned run record, however, was not so good.

PITCHER WILLIAM BYRON HUMPHREY, purchased from Little Rock. Had very brief trials with St. Louis Browns and Cardinals in his early days as a pro. Then was a catcher. Won 20 and lost 7 games for Charlotte in '3[illegible], won 1[illegible] and lost 7 games for Little Rock in '37. Struck out 74 and issued only [illegible] bases on balls in 19[illegible] innings.

PITCHER RICHARD MIDKIFF, recalled from Little Rock where he won 13 and lost 8 in '37. Joined the Red Sox in 1936, fresh from the University of Texas campus, being optioned to Rocky Mount, N. C. Is said to have a fine chance to stick.

OUTFIELDER LEO WILLIAM NONNENKAMP, purchased from Little Rock where he batted .332 in 142 games. Scored 145 runs and made 181 hits, including 39 doubles, 14 triples and six home runs. Nonnenkamp has been around, having been with eleven clubs since he started as a pro in 1930, including Pittsburgh. Was named the Southern league's most valuable player in 1937.

CATCHER JOHN GASTON PEACOCK, recalled from Minneapolis. Peacock has done everything but pitch since leaving the University of North Carolina where he was a Phi Delta Theta. Starred in football also at college. Belonged to Cincinnati until a year ago when he was declared a free agent by Commissioner Landis. Boston signed him and sent him to Minneapolis to acquire catching experience. He batted .311 with the Millers, making 116 hits, including 26 for extra bases, in 100 games. Hit .313 in nine games with Boston.

PITCHER LEE OTIS ROGERS, recalled from Little Rock. Graduate of the University of Alabama where he won 20 and lost but 4 games in three years in addition to starring in football. Member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity. Signed with Red Sox upon his graduation in 1936. Won 13 and lost 8 in '37, pitching 18[illegible] innings. Another southpaw.

PITCHER WILLIAM N. SAYLES, signed as a free agent. Sayles is a student at University of Oregon, a right hander who is 20 years of age. Member of the baseball team the A. A. U. sent to Berlin in 1936 to participate in the baseball tournament held there. He starred in the box in the several games he pitched.

INFIELDER JAMES REUBIN TABOR, recalled from Little Rock. Sophomore at University of Alabama a year ago when he received notice to report at a school the Red Sox were conducting at Little Rock. He looked so good Manager Doc Prothro of Little Rock retained him and played him regularly throughout the season. Prior to the opening of the season, he hit a home run off Bob Feller with the bases filled. He then went on to hit .295, drive in 94 runs and score 9[illegible]. His father played in the minors when a young man, but gave it up to teach school. Jim's agreement with Boston was that he was to finish his education but, a year ago, he asked if he could not report at once as he could not keep his mind on his studies. Is six feet two and his hair is inclined to be red.

PITCHER CHARLES THOMAS WAGNER, purchased from Minneapolis. Looks as if he could win in fast company. Has the poise and does not lose his stuff under fire. Won twenty and lost fourteen games in 1937. Known as "Broadway" because of his immaculate dress. Has pitched professionally only three years but in that time has struck out 400 batters.

OUTFIELDER THEODORE FRANCIS WILLIAMS, purchased from San Diego. Ted will not be twenty years of age until next October. Was a star pitcher for his high school but shifted to the outfield because of his batting ability. Joined San Diego upon quitting school in '36. Became a regular in '37, batted .291, driving in 98 runs and hitting 23 home runs.

Fielders to Hit Hitters to Field | Stengel Bent on Curing Bees' Ills

By JOE CASHMAN

BRADENTON, FLA., MARCH 2.—THE BEES will be one of the most [illegible] league outfits in training this Spring if Manager Stengel [illegible].

Joe Cashman

[illegible] they excel.

For example [illegible] a good [illegible] two [illegible] hours a day [illegible] a .300 [illegible] should [illegible].

And he hopes to sell his charges the [illegible].

He won't insist upon them [illegible].

Fletch, DiMag, Moore to Hit

"THE AVERAGE BALL PLAYER today is an imbecile when it comes to training," Casey contended today. "If he's a fast ball pitcher who lacks a curve or a change of pace, he'll keep throwing his high hard one without ever attempting to experiment with a hook or floater.

"If he's a fence buster who doesn't know the rudiments of defense, he wants to be up at the plate all day instead of being anxious to smooth off his rough fielding edges.

"If he's a sticker who dosen't like curves, he hollers at when he should be grateful to the hurler who hooks him.

"That is ridiculous. A player with a pronounced weakness can't be a big league star, and the one and only way to become flawless is to concentrate on overcoming weaknesses during Spring practice."

So [illegible] Casey [illegible] Bees.

"Well," he replied, "from what I hear and from what the records reveal to me, the pitching and fielding of the club last year was of championship calibre.

"Its failure to land in the first division was due to a team batting average which was the lowest in the majors.

"So I'd like to see my veteran infielders and outfielders do little else but hit during the practice sessions.

"That goes particularly for Elbie Fletcher, Vince DiMaggio and Gene Moore.

"They're standouts in their respective positions afield. After their legs and wind are in shape, the less I see of them with a glove the better I'll like it.

"I want them to have a bat in hand almost continually, when we're having clubhouse meetings, I'd like them to be swinging a stick. On the field I'll urge them to be shadow batting while waiting for their turn at the platter.

"On the other hand, such newcomers at Max West and Hal Woggert, reputedly good hitters and poor fielders, will be advised to concentrate on fielding.

"If I receive co-operation, the team naturally won't look very good down here with everybody exposing his most unlurable side. And maybe none of the efforts will be to any avail.

"But to my mind the players will have everything to gain and nothing to lose by following my advice. None can possibly be much worse off as a result and many might improve."

Only Way to Reach Top Flight

CASEY STOPPED HERE to [illegible] personal [illegible] whenever he goes.

"If I had a pennant contending club," he asserted, "I wouldn't have any such ideas.

"I wouldn't think of giving any batting instruction to an established .300 hitter or fielding advice to a defensive marvel.

"But with an outfit like the Bees which didn't boast of a single .300 hitter last year and which has more than one rookie who can't be rated too highly defensively, our only chance of reaching the first division would seem to lie in my plan.

"I won't ask any player to abandon his normal ways of doing things. I'll ask him merely to try my methods as well as his own.

"Thus, if he don't improve following my instructions, he'll have no trouble in returning to normalcy and won't be able to say that I ruined him."

THE POINT THE PILOT stressed [illegible] was that he intended to place the future of each player in [illegible] players' own hands.

Any player that wants to stick exclusively to his usual style of play will have the privilege with the understanding that if he doesn't show progress he'll be in grave danger of being released.

Any player willing to try anything to succeed will find Stengel and Coach Kelly ready and anxious to spend three or four hours a day extra tutoring him if he so desires.

It will be interesting to note the [illegible] of the various young men.

Cuccinello Hopes Plan to Play Him At Third Is True

'Less Running to Do, And I'm Getting Old, He Says

WARSTLER AT SECOND

He knew [illegible]

"I want to play where I'll do the club the most good," he said. "But I hope the spot is third base.

"For one thing I feel I play better there than at second. For another it is an easier berth to hold down.

"There's less running to do, fewer plays to make, and you know I'm not getting any younger.

"It will be perfectly OK with me, though, if I have to remain at second. It's yet to be seen for that matter whether I can show enough to be in the lineup anywhere."

Catalysis Best Hialeah Bet, Says Wilson

By DAVE WILSON

(Selections for fast track)

BEST BET—CATALYSIS, 5TH.

HIALEAH PARK, Fla., March 2 —Trainer J. M. Milburn added blinkers to Catalysis' equipment in her most recent essay, and the Stimulus filly ran a corking race to be nosed out in the final strides by Sketch Book. The Starmount Stable color-bearer meets less capable rivals in the fifth stanza here tomorrow, and on cold dope shapes up as the one solid hazard of the afternoon's sport.

FIRST—Catechism, Spin On, Kate Smith

CATECHISM, a swift-running filly belonging to Greentree, was literally backed off the boards to drub shifty company in her most recent race, and must be preferred over platers in the day's opener. SPIN ON, a sluggish starter, was up in time to head KATE SMITH and others in her last race.

SECOND—Early Evening, Spindletop, Singing Slave

Toss out EARLY EVENING'S last race. Cary Winfrey's charge disliked the muddy footing which prevailed that day. Previous top form entitles her to a royal chance in the wide-open second. The same goes for SPINDLETOP. SINGING SLAVE just missed drubbing Vassar in her last race and she looms all dangerous.

THIRD—Retlaw, Didutellus, Liberty Torch

RETLAW, a notorious rogue, ran straight and true to drub Spindletop and others in his most recent endeavor. DIDUTELLUS, third to Irish Oak in last race, is in nicely under 100 pounds and may take the whole pot if the top selection neglects to follow the short route. LIBERTY TORCH was a beaten "good thing" in his only outing at Tropical Park, but has since worked to the entire satisfaction of the clocker.

FOURTH—Mansco, Indomitable, Black River

MANSCO, a New England favorite, was pitted in high Beacon Hill society in his last couple of outings and had scant chance to prove his worth. Will Hodson's charge has always been able to master competition of this sort and should do it again. INDOMITABLE and BLACK RIVER figure very much alike.

FIFTH—Catalysis, Huskie Boy, Crimea

HUSKIE BOY, if in a running mood, may give CATALYSIS a real tussle. Trainer Mickey Harrison, however, has been experimenting with the flashy bulldog colt in recent races and workouts, and there's no telling just now he'll perform. CRIMEA is outclassed by the top pair, but easily shapes up next best.

SIXTH—Teufel, Boston Pal, Maedic

TEUFEL, an unfashionable candidate for the Widener Challenge Cup honors, chased War Minstrel for a bit over six furlongs in his last race, and then folded like an accordion. The Diavolo gelding meets less capable rivals in tomorrow's sixth race, and under smooth handling may hang on long enough to win. BOSTON PAL is little more than a selling plater, but he looms all over the danger. MAEDIC holds considerable class and must be respected.

SEVENTH—Steepletop, Peedeeque, Shut Up

Connections were steeple-top high on STEEPLETOP in his last race, but he could do no better than finish a corking fourth to Indian Head. The R. Gross colorbearer slides down several notches on the claiming scale in the seventh race and the "boys" should recoup their losses. PEEDEEQUE closed like a wild horse to head Midshipman and others in his last race.

EIGHTH—Veiled Lady, Flying Banner, Light Brook

VEILED LADY, a right comely miss, appeared to be only "hiding" when she finished fourth to Velociter in her most recent race. With the veils off, Willie Martin's breadwinner should make the accounting at lucrative odds.

Training Camp Gossip

By Associated Press

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—There's an obvious reason why Outfielder Jake Powell joined the New York Yankees' squad several days before he was due. Scaling 189, he is 14 pounds above normal weight.

ORLANDO, Fla.—Manager Bucky Harris of the Washington Senators set aside today for the first session of his annual endeavor to teach Monte Weaver how to conceal his pitching delivery. Harris says Weaver's habit of exposing his grip on the ball cuts his effectiveness 30 per cent.

NEW ORLEANS—Oscar Vitt, Cleveland's new manager, says he regards fifth place as an important spot in the batting order and for that reason the Indians will present a new lineup for their exhibitions. Vitt favors a left-handed heavy hitter for the spot and believes this may call for Earl Averill, who had batted third ever since he joined the club nine years ago.

EN ROUTE to PASADENA, Cal. —The Chicago White Sox, their holdout ranks reduced to three by the signing of Catcher Luke Sewell, were on their way West today to open training drills at Pasadena, Cal., Thursday. The only unsigned Sox are Zeke Bonura, Rip Radcliff and Sugar Cain.

AVALON, Cal.—Charley Grimm ordered his Chicago Cubs' pitchers to "bear down" as they finally got practice under way after three days of rain. Two more flingers, Bill Lee and Tex Carleton, were due for the second real drill today.

TAMPA, Fla.—Bill McKechnie thinks he has found the answer to his relief catching problem in Bill Hershberger. After watching the big California lad work out behind the plate, the Cincinnati manager said he would be started in the Grapefruit League games.

BILOXI, Miss.—The belated arrival of two Phillies' regulars, George (Shagger) Scharein and Hershel Martin has brought the club's list of players to 35, the largest in years. Jimmy Wilson has two players for every position for the first time since he became manager.

LAKE CHARLES, La.—Connie Mack has high hopes for Dario Lodigiani, second baseman for whom the Philadelphia Athletics gave Oakland five players and cash. After watching Dario belt a few, Mack conceded "he's got a lot of power."

Home Run Mark New Goal Set By York

LAKELAND, Fla., March 2 (AP) —Rudolph Preston York, preparing for his second year in the big time with the Detroit Tigers expects to top the 35 home runs he pounded out last season.

The unassuming Rudy, first string catcher for the Tigers, won't predict that he will beat out Joe DiMaggio, Hank Greenberg or Lou Gehrig in the American League swat derby, but he argues the law of averages should be in his favor.

In fact, York indicated he believes he might have led DiMaggio last season had he played the full schedule. The Yankee outfielder hit 46 round-trippers in 620 times at bat, while York made his 35 in 275 visits to the plate.

PLEASED WITH BERTH

Mickey Cochrane, the Detroit manager, has predicted Rudy and Greenberg will out-homer DiMaggio and Gehrig in 1938 and York is confident he will do his part.

The first catcher to arrive at the Tigers training camp, the 210-pound Georgian, who tried out as a first baseman in 1936 and as a third baseman last year, is elated over his regular job and is determined to hold it, come what may.

The second year jinx, which often catches up with big league sophomores, holds no terrors for Rudy. He sees no reason why he should not lift his .307 batting mark of 1937.

BREAKS RUTH'S MARK

"My defensive work should be improved, too," he said. "I'll know my pitchers and my signals better."

High spot of York's first season in the majors came last August, when he smacked 18 home runs to break Babe Ruth's mark of 17 in one month. That performance helped land the post of first string catcher for him.

Rudy won't be the only York in the Detroit camp. He brought along, at the club's invitation, his 18-year-old brother, Levis Cleon York, a first baseman; Levis has played semipro ball around Atco, Ga., the York home.

Autocracy Not Welcomed by U. S. Citizens

Forbes Tells About Catastrophies of Dictatorship

By B. C. FORBES

Events in dictator countries should inspire thankfulness in every American that this country has—or at least so it would appear—turned against autocracy.

There was a time before President Roosevelt sprang his Supreme Court scheme, when the whole drift in our land seemed to be towards regimentation and dictation.

While the new bill to regulate agriculture embodies essentially un-American features, and while Washington is still bent upon expanding governmental competition with private industry, the evidence accumulates that the American public have come to their senses, that they mean to insist upon the preservation of our inherited and cherished individual and state's rights and freedom.

WHOLESALE EXECUTION

Ponder what has been happening in lands under the heel of unbridled dictators.

Russia has staged wholesale executions of prominent leaders who incurred the suspicion of Dictator Stalin. Firing squads have been busy on military leaders, on political leaders and on less influential individuals. The court "trials" of such victims have been absolutely farcial. The very fact that Stalin and his staunchest colleagues became suspicious of anyone was sufficient to decree death.

In other words, life in Russia has become extremely precarious. The Kremlin is a law unto itself, a law spewing forth wholesale murder.

What of Germany under Hitler?

There, also, high military officers have had their official heads chopped off. Throughout the nation unrest, suspicion, uneasiness are rampant. The German people are being subjected to worse and worse hardships. Liberty—liberty of the press, liberty of speech, liberty of the people—has been assassinated. Hitler can truthfully say "I am the state."

ABLEST OF DICTATORS

Mussolini unquestionably has proved the ablest of all dictators. No disclosures have come that he has been confronted at any time with influential secret intrigue to unhorse him. He continues to ride high, wide and handsome.

But what of Italy's social and financial conditions?

Italians are constantly being called upon to submit to "sacrifices" for the sake of the nation—beg pardon, the empire. The standard of living for the vast majority of Italians does not begin to compare with that enjoyed by the majority of Americans. How many Italian families have been bereaved by Mussolini's exploits in Ethiopia and in Spain cannot be estimated.

Moreover, Italy's financial status is such that Mussolini—probably wisely—concluded long ago that it would be unwise to reveal the facts and figures to the world.

DICTATORSHIPS PERILOUS

History records that every dictatorship has culminated in catastrophe.

There's no convincing reason to conclude that history will reverse itself in this respect.

At all events, the indisputable fact is that America and Americans are infinitely more comfortably circumstanced than are any of the peoples today dominated arbitrarily by dictators.

Every check-up of sentiment in our own country agrees that the trend is definitely away from everything savoring of autocracy, state socialism, dictatorship; that the trend now is towards the re-establishment of Americanism and of all that Americanism implies.

And how wise is such a choice!

Reduction in price of high-speed tool steels to a base of 67 cents a pound from 80 cents has been made generally by leading producers since the reduction was announced last week by a Pittsburgh manufacturer.

Haney Analyzes Baruch's Speech

Sincerity and Frankness Found in Statement Before Senate Committee

By LEWIS HANEY

(Professor of Economics, New York University)

Special to Boston Evening American

NEW YORK, March 2—Why did Mr. Baruch's statement before the Senate committee on unemployment get so much attention? He spoke well, but he said nothing but what a good many of us have been saying for four years.

The answer is that Mr. Baruch has influence. He has been a friend of Mr. Roosevelt's. He is a life-long Democrat and a large contributor, no doubt. So what he says will affect what the party in power will do.

ABSOLUTELY SINCERE

Obviously, too, Mr. Baruch was absolutely sincere. He spoke frankly and to the point. Not a trace of bunk.

The gist of his testimony is this: We are suffering from long continued and excessive unemployment, both of labor and of capital. This is caused by abnormal uncertainty, and fear of government schemes. We will never recover prosperity and employment until the causes are removed.

Mr. Baruch says that the uncertainty comes from trying to go against "the ultimate working of the natural forces and the inevitable human equations which govern mankind." He describes the source of fear as being the "new European idea of state regulation and fear of punishment." This, he says, is tending to replace our former system of individual initiative and hope of profits.

"If it (the New Deal) remains what it has recently appeared to be, there is no hope for re-employment and substantial recovery."

Why? Because the uncertainties and fears nearly all come from what the government has been doing or threatening to do.

"No man," says Baruch, "will use his money except upon a chance of profit commensurate with the risk involved." On that point, nobody knows more than he.

I want to add, however, in corollary that no government can afford to use our money or other resources except upon a chance of definite and generally recognized advantages that are commensurate with the costs involved.

GOVERNMENT INTERFERENCE

Mr. Baruch tells us that the causes of the long continued depression in employment and building, and the present severe general depression, are largely governmental interference with our system of individual initiative and private enterprise. He stresses the weakening of the profit motive.

The remedy, therefore, is obvious. It is to restore an economic system that is governed by prices, and motivated by the hope of profits. This successful business man and public spirited citizen says:

"If it became clear tomorrow that America has definitely chosen her traditional profits system, forces would be released that would rapidly hasten recovery and re-employment."

As an economist, my judgment is that this statement is true.

Mr. Baruch emphasizes taxation as a handicap to business, especially the taxes on corporate surplus and for "social security." I wish he had brought out more forcefully how these taxes are a blow at individual thrift and investment.

PURPOSE OF PROFITS TAX

The chief purpose of the tax on undistributed earnings, for example, is to stop private saving and investment, with the idea of having the government do the saving and investment for us! This idea would eventually do away with private property in capital goods. And, of course, the only way the government can "save" is to regiment its citizens and control everything they do.

This is the sort of thing the New Deal has been dallying with, and the result has been as Mr. Baruch points out. As Mr. Roosevelt once said, in another connection, what we have to fear is fear itself!

I honestly believe Mr. Baruch when he solemnly said that he would give every dollar he had if he could cure this condition. I believe that every intelligent and successful man in this country would gladly give half his money, or bear double his present tax for a year or two, if he could know two things: First, that subject to generally recognized ethical limitations, economic forces would now be allowed to govern economic life; second, that we would now return to a gold standard and a non-political Federal Reserve System.

'Taxes too High,' Declares Rail President

Lackawanna Head Says Revision Is Needed

(Editor's Note—This is the second and final article based on an interview with J. M. Davis, prominent railroad executive.)

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

(Copyright, 1938, by International News Service)

NEW YORK, March 2 (INS)— "Taxes are too high—and should be revised."

This was the declaration of J. M. Davis, president of the Lackawanna Railroad, when asked today what, in his opinion, is the big step necessary to bring about permanent business recovery in the United States.

"That goes not only for the federal government but for the states as well," Davis added.

Davis cited high taxation as one of the principal factors responsible for the present plight of the railroads (a situation which is said to be causing President Roosevelt some concern). In 1936, according to Davis, taxes paid by the railroads amounted to $320,000,000, or 7.89 per cent of gross revenue; while in 1929 taxes were 6.32 per cent of revenue.

PAID $4,024,041.54

The Lackawanna, he said, paid in taxes in 1936 the sum of $4,024,041.54 and in 1937 a total of $5,050,946.54. The increase in taxes in 1937 over 1936 therefore was $1,026,905.01, virtually 25 per cent.

Then Davis pointed to the new Social Security taxes which are hitting the railroads hard. Under the Federal retirement act for pensioned employes, which went into effect January 1, 1937, the Lackawanna paid for 1937 a total of $694,267.52. A similar amount was deducted from the wages of Lackawanna's employes.

The unemployment insurance tax, federal and state, showed an increase paid by the Lackawanna of $253,885.84 in 1937 over 1936.

"These are new taxes on us," Davis said, referring to the social security taxes.

"What should be done about these taxes," Davis was asked.

"Well," he replied, "the social security taxes are too high. They have accumulated too much money too rapidly. The government ought to reduce the rates."

Davis declared the undivided profits taxes "should be eliminated entirely."

"If you make money and don't keep some of it for improvements and development you are up against it,' he said.

MAIN FACTORS

Taxes, wages and the increasing cost of things which railroads buy —in addition to the 15 per cent decrease in railroad rates which went into effect January 1, 1937—are the main factors that are making it difficult for the railroads, Davis pointed out. He said the increased costs of railroad operation since 1933 have totaled more than $664,789,000, due to restrictions by legislation, to rises in prices, to increases in wages, etc.

Davis made it clear he is opposed to the shorter work-week. He said the proposal to reduce employment to six hours a day, five days a week, would cost the railroads $600,000,000 annually.

Power Output At New Low

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Electric power production in the United States for the week ended February 26 dropped to a new 1938 low of 2,031,412,000 kilowatt hours, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

This represented a decline of 1.4 per cent from 2,059,165,000 kilowatt hours in the preceding week and a loss of 8 per cent from 2,207,285,000 in the comparable 1937 week.

The contra-seasonal drop carried the Associated Press index of production with 1929-30 taken as 100, to 106.5, also a new 1938 low, from 108 in the preceding week. A year ago the index, which is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 118.

The institute reported the following percentage declines from a year ago according to major geographic areas: New England 11.0, Middle Atlantic 1.3, Central industrial 1.9, West Central 3.4, Southern states 5.0, Rocky Mountain 12.9, and Pacific Coast 3.5.

N. E. Business Less Active, Bank Reports

By Associated Press

Declines of 33 per cent in New England boot and shoe production in January and 44 per cent in raw cotton consumption, as compared with January, 1937, were reported today by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in its monthly business review.

CARLOADINGS BEHIND

The report said general business activity in the six states was lower than in December, after allowances for seasonal changes. It added freight carloadings had been "running considerably behind the corresponding weeks a year ago."

January boot and shoe production was put at 9,468,000 pairs, 33 per cent under a year ago, but 44 per cent above December, 1937.

The Iron Age noted steel manuary jumped 2.7 per cent over December, despite the sharp decline since January, 1937.

The value of new construction contracts awarded in January was put at $9,939,000, as compared with $16,962,000 in December and $13,211,000 in January last year. The average amount of new construction in January, over the nine-year period 1930-1938 inclusive, was $11,418,000, the report added.

STORE SALES OFF

Department store sales in Boston and Providence combined during the week ending February 19 were 9.2 per cent less than in the week ending February 20, 1937, the review said. For the three weeks ending February 19, they were "practically the same as in the corresponding period last year."

'Freeze' Bill for Holding Cos.

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—Senator Carter Glass (D.) of Virginia, introduced in the Senate today a bill to "freeze" bank holding companies at their current field of operation, with provisons for more rigid federal regulation.

The bill was referred to the Senate banking and currency committee which will hold hearings on the measure shortly.

Eight major features were summarized by Glass as follows:

"1—Prohibits formation of additional bank holding companies.

"2—Prohibits existing bank holding companies from acquiring control of additional banks.

"3—Prohibits banks controlled by bank holding companies from establishing additional branches.

"4—Prohibits banks controlled by holding companies from making loans to affiliates or purchasing securities from affiliates or making loans secured by the stock of affiliates.

"5. Requires banks controlled by holding companies to collect loans to their affiliates and loans secured by the stock of their affiliates within three years.

"6. All bank holding companies and their subsidiaries are to be subject to regular investigation and shall make reports as required.

"7. Prohibits payment of dividends by banks to holding companies owning bank stock acquired in violation of the act.

"8. Gives the federal deposit insurance corporation the power to dismiss from insurance any bank violating the act."

'Gas' Stocks Set New High Record

NEW YORK, March 2 (INS)—The American Petroleum Institute today reported that gasoline stocks in the week ended February 26 increased 945,000 barrels to a total of 90,719,000 barrels, a new high record.

Crude oil output for the week dropped 46,450 barrels daily to 3,322,000 barrels, while refineries operations gained 6-10 of a point to 78.1 per cent.

Share Prices Are Mostly Lower

NEW YORK, March 2—Stocks slipped into a slow decline today as buying interest ebbed throughout the market. Losses of fractions to more than a point predominated near the fourth hour.

Speculation marked time while traders looked to Washington and industrial centers for significant news. Selling, brokers said, was restrained by hope of a spring upturn from the present low levels of factory production. At the same time curtailment of public buying power from unemployment, dividend cuts and omissions and scattered salary cuts dampened optimism.

DEALINGS QUIET

Dealings were about the quietest of recent weeks, with only 170,000 shares changing hands on the "big board" in the forenoon.

In other markets watchful waiting also seemed to be the prevailing attitude. Commodities generally held to a narrow course, although wheat sagged. Corporate bonds drew a little better support than stocks.

Possibility the tax bill would undergo more extensive revision on the Senate side than in the House was widely discussed in financial quarters. But traders seemed content to wait for tangible developments.

No Difference!

NEW YORK, March 2 (AP)—Sir Josiah Stamp, British economist, had his own definitions today for the words "depression" and "recession."

He told reporters when he sailed for Europe that the difference between the two terms was "purely psychological."

"A recession," he continued, "is what the politicians call it, and a depression is what Wall Street would call it."

Steel, motor, chemical, farm implement and other groups drifted down from the tops of last week's rally. The extended stay in a restricted trading area left market followers without a clue to the main trend.

SHARE LOSERS

Among the losers were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Smelting, Air Reduction, American Can, American Telephone, New York Central, Sante Fe, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear Tire, Johns-Manville, Westinghouse, duPont, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Sears Roebuck.

Scattered gainers included Allis Chalmers, Chesapeake & Ohio and Chesapeake Corp.

Rail shares encountered moderate offerings. Suspense over the anticipated ICC decision on the freight rate increase request heightened.

Armament stocks also lagged in face of England's plans for pushing its five-year spending program on war machinery and enlargement of its air force.

NEWS SCANNED

Wall Street analysts scanned business news for signs of a spring upturn.

The "Iron Age" noted steel manfacturers were finding indications of improvement, although new orders have not increased sufficiently to expand the industry's operations. Sales offices in many steel-consuming districts, the trade publication reported, "find a better feeling among consumers."

A sharp spring rise in motor production, analysts held, would be necessary to pull most producers back to profit-making levels.

Electric power output for the week ended last Saturday pointed to little actual change in the business pace. The total for the whole country was off 8 per cent compared with the 1937 week, against a year-to-year drop of 6.9 the preceding week.

The French franc lost nearly .01 of a cent at 3.25⅝ cents at the opening of exchange dealings here. The British pound was unchanged at $5.01⅝.

Salesman Man Of Hour, Says Rukeyser

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
International News Service Financial Writer

NEW YORK, March 2—Tip your hat these days to the salesman for he is the man of the hour in the business world.

Economic processes are temporarily stymied because of the transient decline in new orders.

Productive plants are geared up to a high potential state of efficienc, but they are restrained by the inadequacy of orders.

Accordingly, the great need at the moment is greater selling pressure.

In the circumstances, we consumers should welcome the honest vendor of merchandise.

He is not only seeking to earn a commission for himself, but when he consummates the sale he thereby creates the basis for the employment of another person in a factory.

BASIC DEMOCRATIC SYMBOL

And lest you be inclined to acment of the "high cost of distribument of the 'high cost of distribution" by "advanced thinkers," bear in mind that salesmanship is a basic democratic symbol.

The salesman is a living reminder that the American consumer still has freedom of choice.

In totalitarian states of Europe, whether on the right or on the left, the expense of selling is arbitrarily reduced.

Consumers in those countries are regimented into buying whatever the dictators decide.

Those who demur are "persuaded" with bullets instead of psychological appeals.

This writer has been preaching this doctrine for some time, and he is therefore glad that George Soule, an editor of the New Republic, has written a book entitled "The Future of Liberty."

The book is less important for what Mr. Soule has written than for what it has provoked other men into thinking.

Mr. Soule's book recalls that Samuel Johnson wrote tons of learned tomes, yet he lives in history primarily because he incited Doswell to write his stimulating "Life of Johnson."

Mr. Soule's book seems to me important because it inspired Harry D. Gideonse, of the University of Chicago, to write such a vigorous, two-fisted, pro-American rebuttal in the current "Journal of Political Economy."

Forgetting academic politeness, Mr. Gideonse said a mouthful concerning the effect of centralized economic planning on the liberties of ordinary men.

He shows in effect that Mrs Soule is proposing that free men swap their liberties for the promise of fat bellies.

ART OF TALKING BACK

Herewith follows a sample of Mr. Gideonse's use of the manly art of talking back to word mongering theorists:

Mr. Soule's conception of "the future of liberty" is based on an "administered system" in which "we" find out what "we want," and then plan production and prices accordingly. Basic questions like "how do 'we' know what 'we' need?" and "suppose we 'need' it, but don't 'want' it?" receive no attention at all. Their relation to the fundamental problem of "liberty" is apparently not understood, although even a sophomoric understanding of economic problems should suggest the inevitability of "planned" consumption if there are to be "planned production" and "planned prices." Just what would "planned consumption" mean in terms of human choice, innovation, and variety? Who, again, are the "we" that shall "plan" our expenditures for us? If they are the "majority," what remains of Lord Acton's famous dictum that freedom can be measured by the protection that is accorded to minorities? For instance, would any funds be allotted under "planned consumption" to the publication of minority journals of critical opinion, or would the "majority" (or the dictator) be likely to frown upon such use of public funds?

The answers to the pertinent rhetorical questions which Mr. Gideonse raises may be found by reference to the behavior of dictators in the red, black and brown totalitarian states of Europe.

P. S.—Where Europeans were importuned to swap liberty for economic security, they received neither the liberty nor the security.

U. S. Reality First Quarter Is Better

If first-quarter conditions continue for the full year, U. S. Realty & Improvement Co. will show an improvement over 1937, according to Edwin J. Beinecke, chairman, at the annual meeting.

Mr. Beinecke expressed the hope that business conditions in the lower New York area would improve shortly. He said, however, he could see no marked upturn until fall.

New Ship Line to Operate in Hub

WASHINGTON, March 2 (INS)—The ICC today authorized the Ocean Steamship Company at Savannah to establish a water route between New York and Boston. The steamship company is controlled by the Illinois Central and Georgia Railway.

The commission said the reasons why the steamship company desired to engage in additional service is that the New England company, formerly the connection of the Boston & Maine and the Canadian Pacific, no longer operates its boats between New York, Fall River and Long Island Sound ports.

The proposed service by the ocean company would replace that formerly supplied by the New England company so far as through interterritorial traffic is concerned. The Boston & Maine and the Canadian Pacific both urged that the application be granted.

Steel News Seen Near Its Worst

Tremendous Decline Is Reason for Less Bearishness

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Actual, surface news on the steel industry is about as indigo shaded as it is possible for it to get. Consequently those spreading the gospel of pessimism are in a rather cocky frame of mind. But we wonder if such a happening plus one or two undercover developments is not reason for just the opposite stand.

When the extent of the fall in steel production is viewed in retrospect we are moved to ask just what the bearishly inclined want for their money. Surely they do not feel that such a sensitive heavy industry is not represented by just as sensitive a stock group. And this they must do if they feel current levels prevailing for the latter are out of line, in other words, too high. To date the failure of steel stocks to flop further as additional bad news is made public suggests that someone somewhere has reason to have faith in the reports of better inquiries for various steel products. It is entirely possible that their hopes may be dashed and production, if not further cut, will be hard pressed to hold present rates. Then a new decline in the steel group may be warranted on the basis a protracted period of little or no earning power is in sight. Our idea is simply to wait the passing of market judgment in preference to embracing bearishness at a time when the worst one may say is that doubts as to the future exist.

* * *

Reductions in steel prices have already been made known and others may be forthcoming; isolated instances of wage and salary cuts have been announced, and taken together with production figures a dreary picture may be painted. But it is our contention that present low market prices resulted from a discounting of these and they are no longer a reason for declines. The market looks ahead and its chief concern now is the business likely to result from a construction pickup, a rail rate increase and a better demand for automobiles.

* * *

SPRING TRADE PATTERNS

The index of business activity which this writer likes to follow is closely conforming to the pattern of 1936 and is not greatly different from that of 1937. It is compiled and published by the Administration and Research Corp. and reached our desk this morning. Since 1936 was to 1937 what 1938 is expected to mean to 1939, the pattern of two years ago may prove extremely prophetic. After an upturn in January the index fell into the last week of February, where an advance began that lasted into May. Then during the summer a flattening out and a decline from July into September. Now that is almost exactly what we reported here as anticipated in Washington this year.

* * *

Taking an inflexible stand right now would be pure tommyrot, but in the event the index, after three weeks of sidewise movement, started up in the final days of February many people are going to feel considerably elated. Actually, it will be enough if no decline takes place. Then it will look as though a late spring season, dictated by a tardy Easter season, was responsible for the lag.

* * *

THE MARKET NOW

Not as an excuse for any lack of freshness but more as a matter for the record book the writer wants to point out again the lack of motion which has characterized recent dealings. The market now is just slightly above the levels of a week ago and those of nearly two months ago. In the interim there were occasions when lots seemed to be happening and when it appeared almost certain that a positive hint as to the next intermediate move would be given. Nothing of the sort happened. And while the temptation to say something definite daily grows stronger, it would be pure quackery in our opinion. Until the recent stalemate is positively broken such things are just guesswork.

B. & M. Offers RFC Loan Collateral

WASHINGTON, March 2 (AP)—The Boston & Maine Railroad Company notified the Interstate Commerce Commission it was ready to pledge $1,529,000 principal amount of securities now held in its trasury for a $2,000,00 Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan.

The securities offered are in addition to those previously pledged by the road. The commission asked for the additional securiels some time ago in approving the road's application for the loan.

Roskin, Noted Composer, Will Give Concert Here

JANOT S. ROSKIN

Janot S. Roskin, internationally famous composer-conductor, will conduct the orchestra at the concert sponsored by the Sisterhood and the Brotherhood of Temple Ohabei Shalom, Sunday evening, 8 p. m., March 6, in the Hemple Center.

Roskin, whom Dr. Hugo Leichentritt, lecturer on music at Harvard and New York universities, says "is the greatest authority on Jewish Temple music and folklore," fled from Germany when the Nazi party sounded the death knell to Jewish artists.

STUDIED IN BERLIN

Son of a professor of research of the Hebrew language, in Russia, Roskin was sent to Berlin to study, after his talent was proven at an early age.

For seven years he was a director of a conservatory of music in Berlin. Since 1918 he has been director of the Jewish Community choirs in Berlin and director of the mixed choirs of German Police Officials.

In 1928 he was appointed director of music and choral work of the largest synagogue in Berlin.

FORCED TO FLEE

A successful arranger, composer and conductor of Jewish music and folklore, Roskin was forced to flee to this country, where he hopes to continue the cause of musical culture.

Music lovers in Boston will have their first opportunity to meet Mr. Roskin when he directs the orchestra at the concert.

Others appearing on the concert will be Mr. Robert H. Segal, Cantor of Temple Ohabei Shalom; Tania Tuerk, soprano; Dr. Hugo Leichentritt, lecturer on music at Harvard University, the Boston Art Choir and the Women's Art Orchestra.

'Warm Reception' Promised Lewis

SALEM, Ore., March 2—If—and when—he comes to this state, John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain, will get a "warm reception," according to Governor Charles H. Martin.

The chief executive, in announcing that he received word that Lewis was coming to this state, declared:

"Oh, he'll get a warm reception all right. But it would be a good idea for him to remain out of the state."

+ Who is he that will harm you if ye be followers of that which i ood?—I Peter III., 13. +

The text for today is suggested by the lv. Dr. Vincent E. Tomlinson, Universalist Church, Worcester. The next text will be ggested by the Rev. Arthur O. Phinney, Episcopal archdeacon, Lowell.

The Editor Says:

"Exorbitant costs of State and local county and township governments are SAPPING THE ECONOMIC SECURITY OF THE COUNTRY AT THE VERY ROOTS."—George Rothwell Brown, Washington correspondent of the Hearst newspapers.

THE BASIC taxation problem in the United States is that 12 per cent of the income of our people is absorbed by TAXES WITHIN THE STATES.

And of the few States among the forty-eight in the Union which have made any attempts to solve this problem, Mr. Brown says West Virginia is the only one at all CONSPICUOUS.

West Virginia's 55 counties have in four years reduced their total bonded indebtedness from 67 millions to 51 millions.

Is it not an amazing commentary upon the tragic inertia of public opinion that a four-year debt reduction of 16 million dollars should be conspicuous?

MR. BROWN REPORTS

—a growing opinion in Washington that: "The American people cannot continue to bear the burden of unnecessary overlapping State and local administrations."

He means that they cannot bear these burdens and be PROSPEROUS.

Of course, they cannot. America is not prosperous NOW. And these frightful impositions of taxes are in part RESPONSIBLE.

Consider the fact that there are more than 175,000 taxing agencies within the States, performing duplicating and overlapping functions and thus UNNECESSARY functions.

Consider the fact that in the matter of county government alone, the States are maintaining an ancient and inexcusably costly structure of duplication.

West Virginia, for instance, has 55 counties. It could be BETTER GOVERNED with half a dozen or less.

EVERYBODY KNOWS

—that the county government system was set up on the basis of how long it takes to get to the county seat and back with a horse and buggy.

The county government system ought to be brought up to date as means of travel and communication have been brought up to date.

But all the States still have the same number of counties they always had, with each county subdivided into a labyrinth of taxing agencies.

That is why there are more than 175,000 taxing agencies in the 48 States, exclusive of the Federal Government.

And that is why, beyond any doubt, government is "sapping the economic security of the country at the roots," and why AMERICA IS NOT PROSPEROUS.

NECESSARY LEGISLATION

"Proposed legislation permitting school children to be excused from saluting the American flag stood definitely killed by a vote of the Senate."—Tuesday's Boston Evening American.

The Senators who rejected this proposal are to be congratulated; they did the only proper thing.

In the disturbed world of today, horrible wars being fought, other horrible wars imminent, we cannot afford to let it appear that we are abandoning our loyalty to our own country.

Certainly, therefore, this is NOT THE TIME to permit a handful of children to sit with their arms folded while other children stand up and pledge allegiance to the flag that protects them in peace and defends them in war.

The same is true of the Teachers' Oath Law, which Communists, Nazis and radical elements hate.

Every teacher now employed has taken the oath, will never have to take it again. Consequently repeal would benefit only Communists, Nazis and kindred radicals who hope to spread their propaganda in the schools.

Like the Flag Salute Law, which the Senate has so wisely retained, the Teachers' Oath Law is NECESSARY LEGISLATION—doubly necessary today as the United States does its utmost to avoid war by resisting alien influences.

BELLS FOR "UTOPIA"

"Doorbells, previously banned, will be installed at the Old Harbor Village Federal housing project in South Boston."—Tuesday's Boston Evening American.

President Roosevelt and the New Deal love to take the country by surprise; the absence of doorbells at the South Boston "Utopia" was probably only another attempt.

City Councillor Robert G. Wilson, who recently inspected the project, informs us that the ban on bells and buzzers resulted from the Government's determination to discourage peddlers.

He calls it a "mighty poor excuse," and so do we.

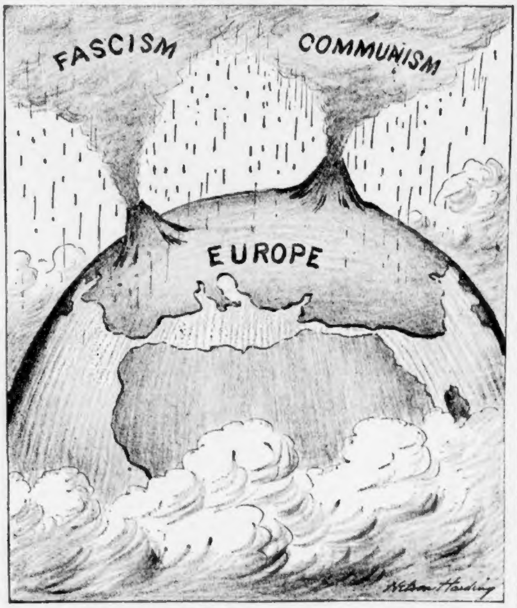
Not everybody is so richly endowed with this world's goods as are the $10,000-a-year politicians who relax in soft chairs in Washington.

Thousands of men and women among the nation's ten million unemployed would grasp at the opportunity to pick up a few cents by house-to-house canvassing.

There is, therefore, no excuse for New Dealers to become snobbish or "high-hat." They ought to remember that the peddlers, whom they are so anxious to bar from "Utopia," help to pay their fat salaries.

New Volcanos in the Old World

By Nelson Harding



Those tremors and rumblings that are disturbing the Old World are not caused entirely by the old imperialist ambitions that brought on the World War.

As Mr. Harding shows, there are two new volcanos "Over There."

For us, observing impending events, there are just two courses to follow:

FIRST—Keep America out of any foreign wars; and SECOND—Keep the alien "ideologies" out of America.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

(One of a series of articles prepared by O. O. McIntyre before his sudden death.)

NOT all the fine old simplicities vanish in the modern whirl. I have visited a half dozen homes, where with heads bowed, grace is said before the meal is served. Quite a number of established families cling to the formal calls on New Year's day afternoons.

Chic Sale, was, when migrating to Hollywood, able instantly to find a buyer for his home at Scarsdale because it had an old-time cistern in the back yard and a grindstone in the front. Homer Croy will rent almost any house that has foot scrapers on the porch steps.

I am told—although I have not seen them—that the urbane Frank Crowinshield wears ear muffs with the brass slip rod in the back on especially nippy nights. And one of the first-cabin haberdashers in the 50's tells me he has several sub rosa red flannel underwear patrons.

Two years ago I was a guest in one of those mellow Murray Hill homes which features a Bible reading twice weekly—Wednesday and Sunday nights. Dinner there is always served by candlelight. The host and hostess are not antiquarians. They merely find sentimental warmth in touches of long ago.

Few criminals are recruited from the vaudeville stage, police records show. A notable exception was the confidence fellow, Dapper Dan Collins, once a trick cyclist. Indeed show folk are surprisingly missing in prisons. Those incarcerated are almost invariably there for some crime passionelle instead of crimes inspired by studied intent. Also there is astonishing lack of alcohol addiction among stage people, considering the tension of their lives.

But drug habits are on the increase, due largely to careless doctors who try to buoy players over the trail of long rehearsals with narcotics.

In sorting old papers today I came upon a meaningless tangle of penciled lines that recalled my first and last experience in attending an art class sketching in the nude. My cicerone was Bob Brinkerhoff, a bona fide student at a studio on one of the Montmartre peaks. He accomplished my deception by introducing me as a fellow artist. And so I sat at an old-fashioned school desk and pretended to be drawing but really scared stiff that the long-bearded professor in charge might pass and glance at my efforts.

I have a fleeting impression of an emaciated looking girl throwing a blanket about her after a few moments and rushing from the room. One more thing, too: How impersonal and business-like it was.

Increasing rumors that nearby Connecticut may at last have a state income tax is furrowing the brows of many New Yorkers who moved over the line when the New York state tax gouge got completely out of bounds. Greenwich, especially, and its environs have been a veritable paradise for those with investment incomes and nothing particular to do. Land values thereabouts have been booming, some almost lost acres selling for as high as $1000 each.

If the rumors are true, Jimmy Walker has a choice of a number of high salaried jobs. Among them a whopping radio commentator post, the presidency of a major league ball club and a sort of Judge Landis type of office supervising boxing.

In the meantime his wife, the former Betty Compton, has launched her flower shop on the fringe of the Gold Coast and the town turned in a gala day welcome. And all the gloomy "What is to become of the Walkers?" prophecies of a year ago seem so much tosh.

Jimmy still has a personal magnetism that charms the proletariat. Whenever he enters a public restaurant there is that sudden rustle and ensuing momentary silence that is the accolade for celebrity.

To this I will subscribe: He is the most engaging fellow the metropolis has ever built up. Often when he has come into public places I have tried to express a chill of indifference but wind up whistling through my teeth.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

TAKE IT FROM EVE

A man can read all the latest books on psychoanalysis and behaviorism, and still be completely at sea about the little human conundrum who sugars his grape-fruit and pours his coffee every morning.

The most pathetically misguided person is the prospective bridegroom, who goes around in a cold perspiration before the wedding, under the delusion that he will be the cynosure of all eyes.

Heaven is not a mythical place. It can be found right down in the heart of the man who has found the work he loves and married the woman he loves.

You can't gauge a woman's charms by the number of times she has been married; because it's a far more difficult feat to hold onto ONE husband these rapid-fire days than it is to lose half a dozen.

Many reams have been written about the dynosaurus and the "Perfect Lover"—but what modern girl has ever met either one of them in her LIFE?

No matter how much faith she may have in her husband, a woman can't help feeling a little shiver of misgiving when he changes his secretaries in the SPRING.

There is no such thing as "lost love." A genuine lover cannot be LOST—he can only be temporarily mislaid; because nothing but death or jail can keep a man away from a woman he honestly loves.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THERE is a hunt on for a new national anthem. "The Star Spangled Banner" and "America," being of foreign musical derivation, are found wanting. The former is condemned on the ground that it isn't singable by any considerable number of people.

Leading scouts for the new song are Lawrence Tibbett, the grand opera baritone; Dr. Henry Goddard Leach, magazine editor; Jascha Heifetz, violinist, and Padraic Colum, president of the poetry society. They meet and agree on the general idea of a simple song of inspiration and beauty which will be American in origin and expressive of all America. Prizes will be offered.

This department has no desire to belittle these patriotic efforts, but it is worth noting that no great song was ever inspired in this manner; and no great drama or poem. "La Marseillaise" came gloriously from the birth struggle of a flaming new ideal of human freedom, fluxed in white-hot emotion, fashioned on the anvil of the gods in a moment of high destiny, as are most memorable outpourings of the human soul.

Simple human gregariousness has inspired our timeless and beloved folk songs. Ben Johnson was a famous elbow-bender around the London taverns, with no patronage of king or prince. He gave us "Drink to Me Only With Thine Eyes." It just welled up in his heart. He didn't compete for a prize.

The most banal song ever written was turned out by the gifted Irving Berlin when they slammed him into a corner in the World War and told him to kick out an inspiring war song—pronto. What they got was:

Don't you worry, Mother, darling,
Although the skies are gray;
There is always a bit of sunshine
In the Y—M—C—A.

Just by way of noting what has naturally boiled up in America, in the way of song and music in general, there is a mighty interesting new book out called "From Jehovah to Jazz," by Helen L. Kaufmann.

I offer it in support of my suggestion that the songs of a nation, patriotic and frivolous, and all in between spring in their own time from work, adventure, fervor and faith, folk longings and fears, natural human ebullience, frustration, deviltry, amour, homesickness, rum and braggadocio.

Miss Kaufmann, in an easy and clubby style, rounds up our musical history as I have never seen it done before—early day psalm-singing, Indian songs, college songs, sentimental ballads, opera songs, blues, ragtime, swing and all the rest.

One thing I liked about the book was that it invited a merry, off-hand mood, declared everybody in and didn't require a diploma from the Boston Conservatory for its enjoyment. I am for that spirit in all the arts.

After noting that authentic American music is still in the making, and admitting that this is an undertaking requiring earnestness and devotion, Miss Kaufmann says:

"Let those who see in those terms continue so to interpret. But let those who can do so with due regard to the serious aspects of life think in terms of relief from its tension. Let them utilize the entire musical experience of the past three centuries, plus their own magnificent twentieth-century equipment, their alertness and their aliveness, to make a new heaven of American music.

"Let there be flocks of 'angels,' to promote composition and performance, so that never again can an artist or writer complain that he lacks the means to proceed with his work. And let the people who look to that heaven for their musical sustenance be prepared to receive it with open minds and hearts."

The Political Parade

By George Rothwell Brown

WASHINGTON, March 2.

IT SEEMS almost inconceivable that Cordell Hull and Henry Wallace should be dovetailing their economic theories together so neatly without the most careful planning.

But the evidence is they don't even read each other's stuff, and that the Secretary of State, who intellectually is living back in the days of the late John C. Calhoun, is no ardent admirer of the surrealist economist from Iowa.

Yet entirely without any plotting between them Wallace proceeds to create a scarcity of farm products in the United States, and Cordell works feverishly night and day to have the scarcity gaps filled up by foreign importations of foodstuffs.

In his Des Moines speech, Mr. Hull had the superlative naivete to tell the tall-corn farmers that they "have been subjected to a veritable barrage of sinister propaganda designed . . . to wreck the most important policy which our country can pursue to promote its economic self-being and peace." Meaning the Hull reciprocity treaties—although why drag in peace?

Mr. Hull's proclivity to point with pride while shaving himself of mornings recalls the remark of the Texas colored man who had been listening to a speech by Joe Bailey. He said:

"De Senatuh suttainly do recommen' hisself mos' highly!"

The truth is that careful search in Washington fails to reveal here or elsewhere any propaganda against the Hull reciprocity treaties. Yet it is high time there was some organized movement against them. Individuals who are being ruined by these treaties are bringing their plaintive pleas as individuals. Faint echoes of closing factory doors reach the Capitol. But as for propaganda—

Well, the principal propaganda is a very strongly organized movement now very active, in SUPPORT OF HULL'S RECIPROCITY TREATIES.

Mr. Hull can hardly be ignorant of the fact that this pro-reciprocity propaganda is bountifully financed, and is directed by one of his State Department subordinates, or one lately connected with the State Department.

Moreover, the State Department does not hesitate to be evasive in its analysis of export and import figures, even for Democratic Senators seeking the facts. Always it is made to appear that the treaties have increased the favorable balance of trade.

The State Department will point with pride to the fact that the balance of trade in our favor in 1937 was $262,000,000. What it neglects to say is that the largest gains were with countries with which we have no reciprocity treaties, and that our exports of war materials increased from $447,000,000 in 1936 to $776,000,000 in 1937. What does Hull mean by "peace"?

The evidence as to what Hull's treaties are doing to impoverish American agriculture—while Wallace creates more and more scarcity—may have sharp repercussions in the approaching elections.

The California raisin and fig industries are facing the same ruin through the proposed treaty with Turkey that Iowa has already felt through the importation of foreign pork products.

March of Events

By Benjamin DeCasseres

GIVE your globe-map a whirl and look at that necklace of islands 1200 miles long which extends west from the southern tip of Alaska in the direction of Asiatic Russia.

They are the Aleutian Islands. They belong to the United States. Major-General William C. Rivers told the House Naval Affairs Committee the other day that "a moderate fleet based on the Aleutians can defend our West Coast and the Panama Canal better and more economically than a fleet based on Honolulu."

The Aleutians today are peopled by Eskimos. When the Russians took over those islands in 1741 there was a population of about 25,000. But so brutal were the Russians, who reduced all the people to slavery, that in 1920 there was only 1080 persons left on the islands. They became ours in 1867.

The Aleutians will have a great strategic value if we ever have a Pacific war. A hostile fleet anchored in those islands will command our Western Coast.

In our naval defense preparations, let us cast an eye on these almost forgotten Aleutian Islands.

There is a growing demand that the National Security Act shall be modified.

As a matter of fact, this act, devised and executed from the most philanthropic motives, has put us further on the road to state Socialism than any other law that has ever been enacted in 150 years.

In tracing the evolution of the American republic, future historians, I believe, will point to the National Security Act as the first giant wedge inserted under the Bill of Rights.

As A. F. Candle, of Boston, writes me:

"If the government can take one per cent weekly of my earnings out of my envelope and can take part of my employer's earnings out of his envelope without our consent, what is to prevent it from taking out five per cent?"

Or, Mr. Candle, what is to prevent the government taking your WHOLE ENVELOPE and ALL of your employer's profits?

There is NOTHING to prevent it. THE GOVERNMENT CAN CONFISCATE ALL YOU'VE GOT!

Chaos, and all that sort of thing, is surely upon us, for here is a professor of mathematics, Dr. Edward Huntington, of Harvard, telling us that logic and figures DO lie.

In fact, two and two make four only conditionally, says Dr. Huntington.

I always suspected that logic was nothing but a mental tape-measure to justify our prejudices.

But I'm not so sure about two and two not making four. Even if I didn't believe it, the collector of internal revenue still does.
